With the dawn of this Historic, peaceful new year of 1946 comes an invitation (by appointment only) to visit MARBLE HALL and open only to prospective purchasers and collectors of today to buy authentic, important furnishings and bric-a-brac from the mansions of the great men of the past that made the history of eras that is legendary now.

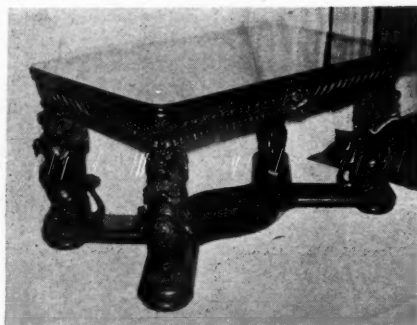

The collection has been adjudged by collectors and authorities to be the finest and largest assembled privately in western New York. The tastes run in beautiful French, English and European rarities.

This is and always will be a hobby and a side issue as I am an automobile dealer and now with the close of the war I'm expanding my agency, but I cannot resist the pleasure I get from my antique collecting, always buying, selling and building the finest collection possible to obtain. I am not disposing of my entire collection, but am very much over crowded and must dispose of many fine things I wish I could keep, but bank roll and space prohibits further buying which I cannot resist.

The prices are fair and not inflated. I have photographs of many of the fine pieces and to those that cannot make a personal visit I solicit your wants and if I have it for sale in my collection will forward photo. Checks receive priority, shipping and professional crating additional.

LOOKING GLASS LORE

By FRANK FARRINGTON

About a century and a quarter before Lewis Carroll wrote "Through the Looking Glass" and started adults as well as children quoting rhymes about the "Jabberwock" and "The Walrus and the Carpenter," one John Elliott, at his shop in Walnut street, Philadelphia, was making mirrors that "tell no falsehood and reflect truthfully and faithfully all that comes before them."

As he declared, he "tooke Tinfoyle on a flat table, effac'd all folds and crevasses, rub'd with Mercury, scrap'd off the impure scum . . . let set, then work'd a fresh, slid stark clean glass on the quicken'd foyle, harden'd on hots and, burnish'd with Brimstone and Bucksin and fabricate'd a crystal Mirror."

But John Elliott's Philadelphia mirror making of 1768 was not the beginning of mirror making, not even in America, where the first mirrors seem to have been made about 1710, though it is not certain that even then the glass was silvered here. Mirrors were made in England as early as 1673 and from that time until about 1740 it is doubtful whether any mirrored glass was made in America, unless it might have been fashioned in some crude, home-made way.

When Americans made a looking glass before 1750, it was almost certainly with the use of imported mirror glass, probably made by the workmen the Duke of Buckingham had brought to England from Vienna to be worked at Vauxhall. And John Elliot made his mirrors with the application of tinfoil coated with mercury and stuck to the glass under pressure, just as Buckingham's workers made them in the reign of George II.

Good mirrors have always been expensive. Two hundred years ago, when mirrors were just beginning to be considered a necessity, it was necessary to pay as much as $200 for a quality article. It is doubtful whether today those same mirrors, as authentic antiques, would bring as much. Hudson Moore in his invaluable "Collector's Manual," recounts the story that the Countess of Fiesque displayed a very beautiful mirror and a friend asked how she came to have it. "I had a troublesome state," she replied, "which produced nothing but corn, so I sold it and with the money bought this mirror. Have I not done well?" Apparently it meant nothing to the Countess of Fiesque that numbers of French peasants must go hungry through the winter in order that she might stand in admiration before the newfangled contraption called a looking glass.

American mirrors have followed many forms and styles down through the years from 1750. One of the earliest was the quaint little "courting mirror." This comprised a rectangular with a geometrically arched top and it was rather crude in appearance and not very large, up to about 12 by 14 inches. Openings in the molding at the sides were filled in with decorated glass while at the top was a floral or other design. The name, "courting mirror," seems to have been given entirely arbitrarily. This mirror has been copied to a limited extent in recent years.

The so-called "tabernacle" mirror was an Empire mirror in vogue in the late 18th and early 19th century. It was made in many sizes and was vertically oblong, with a smaller mirror section at the top, perhaps a third of the glass area, or that section might be devoted to a picture painted on the back of the glass and separated from the actual mirror by a strip of molding. This painted picture oftener than not was crude. Some of the best ones showed in gilt a "painted ship on a painted sea," with gilded design around it in lieu of frame. The mirror frame might be of pine base, with carved mahogany rope columns set on the sides, with grooved top and bottom moldings and block corners that might or might not have ornamental rosettes of brass. There was a top cornice with a row of equidistant pendant balls (or earlier, acorns). Many of these mirrors were fully gilded. Some of those extant today have reproduction paintings, so well done in imitation as to pass for original.

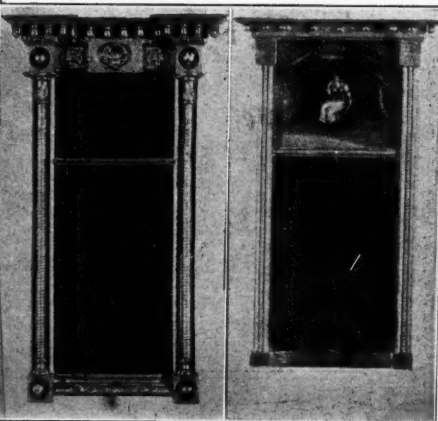

At about the same period as the "tabernacle" mirrors came other Empire mirrors, with or without a top glass and painted picture. These had no cornice and the frames were heavily gilded affairs with symmetrically placed half-round "turnings" or plaster of paris ornamentation on top, bottom and sides. Some were almost massive in the width of the molding. As found today these often lack much of the gilt and sometimes have been spoiled by the use of cheap modern gold paint, much less desirable than the old gilt even at its worst. A good deal of the old frame gilt, instead of being gold leaf, was made by applying silver leaf and covering that with gold lacquer. These mirrors are sometimes found in sizes so small as almost to be miniatures, perhaps 8 by 14 inches.

The common desire to own a nice Chippendale mirror has taken a large proportion of the Chippendales off the market. Without going into the elaborate Chippendales with Chinese and rococo motifs with broken arches, pheasants and gilt plaster ornaments, there are the best known type, almost always of mahogany, almost never of maple, with the outer edge around the top and bottom given a fretted setting, consisting of cut-out curve and scroll-like designs, with the C-curves open toward the frame. At the top of the finest ones the fretted addition will have a space which is ornamented with such a figure as an eagle, a shell, three feathers, etc. These Chippendales, as found in antique shops almost always have one or more of the "ears" replaced because of breakage, but if the work is well done, that need not detract from the attractiveness of the piece and very little from its value. Modern copies of these mirrors are fairly numerous and attractive, but lacking in the money value of originals. Most Chippendales have a narrow gilt molding next to the glass and often there is a light colored line of inlay in the molding. Some persons have, apparently in unjust derision; referred to the Chippendales and others with cut-out extra-frame design, as "jig-saw" mirrors. They deserve more respect.

The mirror that is distinguished by the name, "Queen Anne," was a fairly early type of English mirror, dating from about 1710. This presented a flat wood frame with a quarter-round convex molding sides and bottom, and with a double cyma molding at the top. (Cyma, pronounced sima, technically cyma recta, is, in a molding, hollowed in its outer edge and swelling in its inner edge. The reverse, cyma reverse, is nothing more nor less than our old friend, "ogee"). The oldest of these mirrors had an upper and a lower glass, the upper overlapping the lower and sometimes engraved in bird and flower designs. At the top there was an extension piece with a fancy motif, cut rather less "jig-sawish" than the Chippendale.

Then comes, of later date, the mirror with the "ogee" frame. Rectangular, of all sizes and proportions, almost invariably veneered with mahogany. The "ogee" molding of the frame (cyma reverse) swelling on its outer edge, hollowing on its inner edge. These mirrors are obtainable in most antique shops in good condition, or empty frames are to be had, the mirror glass for which, even in plate, is not too expensive. Some use beveled plate because they like it, despite the fact that it was seldom used in the originals. Unless one seeks for the effect of old glass and makes no practical use of the mirror, there is little to be said for leaving the original in the frame. It is dingy from deterioration of the backing and gives reflections that are almost indistinguishable. — Illustrations from Parke-Bernet Catalogs.

THE OTHER TETRAZZINI

NO, NOT EVA, the famous elder sister of the even more famous Luisa—but Elvira. Ever hear of her? Well, whether you have or have not, don't be surprised if you have a record of Elvira's voice in your collection. Recently discovered evidence indicates that it was not Eva Tetrazzini who made the Columbia and Phonodisc records labelled E. TETRAZZINI, as most of us have presumed, but Elvira, a third sister. Elvira Tetrazzini was born in 1867. She was five years younger than Eva and four years older than Luisa.

This information comes to us through the kindness of Keith Moyer of Everett, Washington, who had it from an American soldier in Italy named Richard Myers. It seems that while in Italy some months ago, Myers met a man who proved to have a vast knowledge of the distinguished singers of the past thirty years and who had been associated with Luisa Tetrazzini for a long time as an accompanist for her pupils. He told Myers that when he once mentioned to Tetrazzini he had one of her sister Eva's records (a duet with Baldassari), she flew into a rage, declaring Eva had never made any records at all, and that the singer on the record was her other sister, Elvira. Elvira, said Luisa, although a good singer, was the black ewe of the family, as it were.

Well, that's the story. Now for the pros and cons. For reasons which will be understood by all who have talked with enough passé prima donnas to know the characteristics of the type, I at first felt doubtful about accepting Luisa's surprising statements as the truth. At that time, I had never even heard of Elvira Tetrazzini. Moreover, a friend of mine remembered being told by Cleofonte Campanini, husband of Eva, that his wife's records were not satisfactory. Could it be, I wondered, that since the "E. Tetrazzini" records are all poor, Luisa was merely trying to shift the blame for them from Eva, to Elvira, whom she evidently despised? A fantastic thought, perhaps, but I have heard even stranger statements from the lips of aged singers.

On the other hand, what if there really were such a person as Elvira Tetrazzini? What if Luisa's story really were the truth? Why should I presume that when Campanini said his wife's records were not satisfactory, he was referring to the Columbia and Phonodisc records of "E. Tetrazzini" when he might have meant unpublished test records made for some other company?

This story, I felt, was important and should be made known to the record collecting world, but, before publishing it, I wanted substantiating evidence. It was not long before I found some, in an article about Luisa published, as I recall, in a 1908 issue of THE THEATRE MAGAZINE. There, for the first time, I saw the name of Elvira Tetrazzini in print. Then the real reason for Luisa's rage struck me. In printing only the initial of the first name on the labels, the record companies and Elvira, knowing full well the record buyer would automatically assume that the E. stood for Eva, had perhaps conspired against the public, on the theory that a record by the celebrated Eva Tetrazzini would sell much better than one by the relatively obscure Elvira. This must have irked Luisa at the time, for the records were atrocious, and it is easy to understand how the realization that the conspiracy was still succeeding, years after the records had become obsolete, could have infuriated Eva's ever loyal younger sister.

Finally, the arguments in favor of attributing the "E. Tetrazzini" records to Elvira were cogently summed up in a recent letter from the Dutch collector, Leo Riemens, who wrote:

"Keith Moyer told me about the Eva Tetrazzini mix-up. To me it is now quite clear, and I am firmly convinced that it was Elvira who made the records. For one thing, there actually was an Elvira Tetrazzini. Her name is listed as a teacher in my Italian artist's directory of 1932. At that time, I supposed they had made a mistake, and meant Eva! Another thing: not one of the records, not one of the record catalogs lists the first name of the singer in full; it is always simply E. Tetrazzini. I have all the Phonodiscs, and in the duets the first names of all the singers are abbreviated. But, in the solos, the first names are given in full in the case of every singer with the single exception of E. Tetrzzini, who remains just that. This I consider suspicious, to say the least! But perhaps the strongest argument of all is this: why should Eva Tetrzzini, a famous star in comfortable circumstances and the wife of Cleofonte Campanini, a popular conductor, make records for a small, second-rate company like Phonodisc whose artists, with the exception of Burzio, were all good but minor singers. Also, why should she make her duets with such perfect naughts as Acerbi, Baldasari, Santini and so on? Furthermore, why it is that, while Eva was a dramatic soprano, all the selections recorded by "E. Tetrzzini" belong to the lyric-colorature repertoire? (As far as can be ascertained, not one of the operas associated with Eva's career is among those represented on the E. Tetrzzini discs.) This is a point that caused comment among record collectors even before Elvira was heard of.

"But somehow I feel sure Eva must have recorded. Perhaps she will turn up on Zonophone some day. More definite, however, is the Fonotipia advertisement, which Guy Ferrant showed me in Paris in 1939, listing Eva Tetrzzini's name in full. Thus I feel sure Eva must have recorded. Nevertheless, with a heavy heart, I am scratching out her name at the head of my lists of Phonodisc and Columbia records and substituting that of Elvira. And remember that I was the first to draw attention to the Phonodiscs of "E. Tetrzzini" in the Gramophone (a magazine published in England) about 1936, at which time I attributed them to Eva, and naturally it goes against the grain a bit to admit my mistake. Yet in the face of the information which has recently come to light, I must declare myself definitely in favor of Elvira."

Favorite Pioneer Recording Artists

COLLECTORS' VOTE ON "THE SUPREME FIFTEEN"

By ULYSSES (JIM) WALSH

Henry Hamblen, of Nashville, belongs with Mr. Norton as the only collector who put Billy Murray any lower than a tie for first place. "I would unhesitatingly vote Billy the No. 1 place but for one thing," he wrote. "That very thing is what, no doubt, makes him the idol of so many. He will be singing right along melodiously and drop into talk, which I despise." Henry listed 20 artists, as follows:

1—Burr; 2—J. W. Myers; 3—Murray; 4—Macdonough; 5—Harry Tally; 6—Campbell; 7—James F. Harrison; 8—Harry Anthony; 9—Quinn; 10—Ada Jones; 11—Spencer; 12—Stanley; 13—Corinne Morgan; 14—Dudley; 15—Roberts; 16—Collins; 17—Harlan; 18—Lucy Marsh; 19—George Gaskin; 20—Elise Stevenson.

Charles B. Clark, a retired vaudeville performer, of Wellington, Ohio, sent an interesting list, but, not clearly understanding the "pioneer" stipulation, included a good many artists beyond the time period which I had intended.

He wrote: "I should name Billy Murray as No. 1 on my entertainment list, and others as follows: 2—Nora Bayes; 3—Jack Norworth; 4—Henry Burr; 5—Frances White; 6—Arthur Fields and Al Bernard; 7—Sam Ash; 8—Billy Golden, Joe Hughes and Jim Marlowe; 9—Marion Harris; 10—Steve Porter; 11—Frank C. Stanley; 12—Nat M. Willis; 13—Billy Jones and Ernie Hare; 14—Gus Van and Joe Schenk; 15—Elizabeth Brice and Charles King."

Ray Matschullat, of Omaha, did not give a complete list, but said: "Without a doubt my favorite recording artist is Billy Murray. When I was little my parents had several of his records. In one form or another, I have over 200 of his records. With the poor methods they had of recording in those days, his voice always came through with flying colors."

"My favorite woman singer of those days," Matschullat said, "is Marion Harris. To my way of thinking, she had a voice in a million."

"Next to Billy Murray and Marion Harris, my favorites are Aileen Stanley, Nora Bayes, Collins and Harlan and Johnny Marvin."

Charlie Hodgdon, of Salisbury, Mass., got his list to me a few days before I was ready to begin writing this article. Knowing his great fondness for the records of Harry Macdonough, Steve Porter and Bill Hooley, I imagined he would choose one of them for first place, but he too, picked Billy Murray, saying: "Billy is my choice because of his many successful years before the public, even as late as the jitterbug era, without one ounce of criticism. Never have I heard anyone say he didn't like Billy Murray's singing."

The following are excerpts from Charlie's comments on his other choices:

"2. Harry Macdonough—This great tenor of the Hayden and Orpheus Quartets ranks No. 2 with me. I have never heard finer diction than Mr. Macdonough's. He was an excellent singer of ballads, standard songs and light opera."

"3. Henry Burr—to many people he was tops in ballad singing. He was also before the public for a long number of years, and a great favorite with all. I especially like his duet singing with Al Campbell."

"4. Steve Porter—My own favorite. If he had included a few popular songs and ballads, I believe he would have had a great many more fans. He was a finished musician, master of dialects, versatile singer and a good pinch-hitter on any team."

"5. Byron G. Harlan—This sweet-voiced tenor is my choice for No. 5. His 'rube' sketches were tops, reminding me more of the old New England Yankee than any other recorder."

"6. John Bieling—Without any doubt the sweetest voice I have ever heard on records. His fine work in the Hayden and American Quartets and duets with Van Brunt and Macdonough are enough to rate him No. 6."

"7. Albert Campbell—His fine work in the Peerless Quartet and Sterling Trio and the Campbell-Burr duets rate Al No. 7, not to mention his fine personality, which all of his comrades praise. I'm glad he is alive and still going strong."

"8. William F. Hooley—Basso of the Hayden, American, Orpheus, Lyric and other leading quartets. What more need be said of old Bill, the King of Quartet Basses?"

"9. S. H. Dudley—For years the editor of the Victor record catalog and very capable baritone of the Hayden Quartet. Old Sam rates No. 9."

"10. F. C. Stanley—No one before the public so short a time ever made a better impression than Mr. Stanley. As organizer of the Peerless Quartet and maker of fine duets with leading singers of his day, he rates No. 10."

"11—Billy Golden; 12—Cal Stewart; 13—Bob Roberts; 14—Ada Jones; 15—Arthur Collins."

And so ends the fan mail occasioned by my "Are These the Supreme Fifteen?" article. I hope, and believe, the results will prove interesting to HOBBIES readers. If I had received hundreds, or thousands, of letters instead of a dozen or so, the result might have been different, but I doubt it. I imagine this small cross-section gives a good idea of what collectors think of the old-time recording artists. At any rate, I have tabulated the figures as accurately as possible and reported them honestly.

The Curious History of Music Boxes

By Mosorick & Heckert

The story of automatic musical instruments, from their earliest conception down through the years to the invention of the phonograph, is authentically traced in this unusual book, that contains the description and interesting historical background of music boxes of all types, and illustrates many of the rarest examples. Some of these took strange shapes, such as the butterfly music box, or the musical pistol, and many others, and are pictured for the first time in this limited edition, which also includes a section on

THROUGH A MUSICAL MUSEUM

By RUTH M. COFFIN

COME WITH me and visit the home of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Ghare, of Indianapolis, and see a wonderful collection of unique music boxes. It is a privilege I enjoyed recently and my enthusiasm over the rare collection of musical oddities prompts me to take you with me on a memory tour.

This hobby, that is enjoyed alike by both Mr. and Mrs. Ghare, is a delightful one. They have spent years in collecting these musical items and if one is found that is badly in need of repair, but a musical gem, it is painstakingly made whole again. They collect only rare, old specimens, nothing new or modern is allowed to be introduced into this collection.

As we stand before the door of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ghare, we press what we mistakenly imagine is the usual door bell. Much to our surprise, we are greeted with sweet strains of music popular in the long ago. This is accomplished by cunningly combining an old music box with modern door bell wiring. As we enter the house, we are asked to sign a "register" which Mr. and Mrs. Ghare plan to keep as a souvenir. Then he asks you to read some appropriate verses that are a part of the book:

Music boxes, large and small,
Wide and narrow, short and tall,
With metal discs, long brass rolls
And paper reels punched full of holes.

Dolls that dance and birds that sing,
Drums that beat and bells that ring,
Ships that rock o'er stormy seas
With sails that billow in the breeze.

Rare old china plays a tune,
An ancient album starts to croon,
A chair sings out in tones so sweet
When you attempt to take a seat.

Porcelain mugs and clocks and jars
Play a few melodious bars.
All these and more, you've come to see
And marvel at—without a fee!

So register in our little book,
Some day we'll take it down and look
At all the names—they'll bring to mind
Our many friends, so good and kind.

You sit down on a beautifully carved chair to sign the "register" and are not a little surprised at the elfin tune it tinkles out! This is really your first introduction to a musical fairyland.

The whole collection fills two spacious rooms in the basement of the home. The walls of knotty pine, the blazing hearth, soft rugs on the floor, the incandescent lighting, make a beautiful setting for these treasures.

THREE MECHANICAL birds in cage; one sings beautiful bird song, all move; excellent condition; bears maker's name, $200.—Mrs. O. L. Williams, 808 Race Ave., Lancaster, Penna. ja1651

Sweet music, perhaps a Viennese waltz, greets you as you come into the pine scented room. Music boxes of every age, every size and shape and color are grouped in attractive display. When the Viennese waltz has faded into dimness, our host leads us to a seven foot giant old music box of beautiful cherry wood. A large, flat metal disc turns only once to play a full tune. When this has been set in motion, we hearken back to the Gay Nineties and hear perhaps "The Strawberry Blonde."

We then turn to a beautiful Swiss music box cradling a polished brass cylinder. The case is marvelously carved and inlaid with Mother-of-pearl. As we peer into the glass protected case, we see a miniature drum and a tiny set of bells and castanets in motion, keeping perfect time to the old fashioned music.

Perfect little birds, complete to the last feather, swing on their perches in gilt cages and trill and twitter as though they were alive. In an ornate frame, a sturdy ship with spread sails, rocks gently over a billowing wave to lullaby music. Over the comfortable warmth of the fireplace with its leaping flames, a deep mantle is filled with steins and jugs, all with tiny concealed music boxes. You tip an old fashioned mug to the tune of "Nobody Knows How Dry I Am!"

In a corner is an old, old street barrel organ. When it wheezes out "East Side, West Side" you can almost see a capering monkey skipping along beside it. A roller barrel piano occupies another corner. Three, tiny, brightly dressed figures, two men and a little maid, go through a novel routine. The small maid beats the cymbals, the little men gesture convincingly. One holds out a platter for coins which he immediately empties into a container and then he flashes back with his platter for more coins.

An old oil painting hangs over the fireplace. It is a picture of an old French castle with an illuminated clock in the tower that strikes the hour and half-hour in full, deep tones. Soft music comes from the castle at intervals.

A Christmas tree holder, designed long ago in Germany, to hold a tree at Yuletide, fully six feet tall, revolves slowly, all the while playing old German Christmas music.

We are next invited to view a very unique type of music box. A peculiar, odd sleeve-like cuff, which in reality is a musical cylinder, is inserted into an old-time box and again we hear music of a bygone age. On another intricately carved musical chair built for tiny tots, and that tinkles forth a tune when the child clambors to the seat, is a beautiful old wax doll.

She smiles sweetly when she is picked up and fondled and repays us with a soft lullaby tune.

Then we are conducted to a miniature stage, complete in every detail, where the curtain has risen on an act that is apparently the high light of the "show." Ten small figures are grouped in a most life-like manner about the stage. We see one group sitting at a card table, intent on their game; another group is having tea in a most fashionable manner. In a corner, a forgotten child sulks on his gently swaying hobby horse, and on a microscopic rug, an unbelievably small dog toys with a revolving ball. This is an original, old French piece of work. Ever so often drawing room music will tinkle and small feet start tapping. The tiny men and women are dressed in the original quaint garments of the era.

Blatant carnival music assails our ears and we turn to see a garish merry-go-round in full swing with its load of merrymakers mounted on mechanical horses.

Our host then shows us one of his most valued treasures, a small, exquisitely made chased silver box that fits in the palm of the hand. A scrap of a bird with radiant plumage flashes from the box for an instant, twittering softly, then as suddenly disappears within the box. One never quite understands just how this disappearing act is done.

On an old fashioned "what-not" in the corner, we see various articles that seemingly have no relation at all to music. We idly pick up a beautiful piece of old china and are surprised to hear faint music tinkle forth. An old album is taken down and examined and again we are astonished to hear strains of old, half-forgotten music. Glass decanters of beautiful pressed glass obligingly play for us when taken down from the shelves.

Linda, the five-year old granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ghre, loves all of these musical boxes and has a particularly fine little Swiss box for her very own. Several really fine old music boxes have found their way upstairs, having overflowed from the social rooms in the basement.

Mr. and Mrs. Ghre keep adding to their treasures whenever the opportunity presents itself. It is their only hobby and they find it extremely interesting.

Perhaps you feel as I do when forced to tear oneself away from this wonderland.

An hour of living in another day
An hour of hearing music boxes play—
Fairlyland of music, dreams come true,
Reluctantly we bid you now adieu.

AUDUBON PRINTS

Presented to Milwaukee Library

According to the Milwaukee, Wis., Journal an original set of John James Audubon's famous colored engravings of American birds, has been presented to the Milwaukee Public Library, by the Joseph Schlitz Brewing Company.

The collection consists of 435 hand colored engravings, each measuring 39½ by 26½ inches. The rare set was purchased in its original form—four huge leather bound volumes. It was arranged by the donor to have the leather bindings removed there and have each of the 435 engravings framed.

It was specified that while the gift is to the public library, the framed engravings are to be loaned to the public and parochial schools of Milwaukee during their regular semesters. Each engraving bears the scientific and popular name of the birds pictured. Many of them show both male and female of the species and depict the habitat of the birds.

Richard E. Krug, librarian, plans to rotate the engravings among all schools of the city which will accept the responsibility of properly caring for them. The engravings would be returned to the public library at the close of each spring semester and, if proper arrangements can be made, will be displayed to the public during the summer months at the library.

The original edition of "The Birds of America" was published by Audubon in London, England, between 1827 and 1838. Each plate reproduced an original water color painting of a life sized American bird, or birds, by the famous naturalist-artist. The plates were aquatint engravings and were printed on double elephant folio Whatman paper. The first 10 plates were engraved by William H. Lizars, a famous engraver of Edinburgh, Scotland, and later were retouched and reprinted by Robert Havel & Son (Robert Havel, Jr.) in London. The Havels, father and son, completed engraving and coloring the remainder of the set.

The plates were then printed and the sets sold by Audubon for 200 guineas ($1,000 in America). It is known that fewer than 200 complete bound sets were made up. A few separate prints were also sold by Audubon. One of the first complete sets was given to the United States congressional library as a permanent record of American bird lore. A number of the sets were sold in England and in France, the king of France purchasing six.

Officials of the Schlitz Co. had sought a complete original Audubon set for the public library for several years. It was finally learned that an eastern university possessed two such sets and one was acquired. It was understood by university officials that the set would be given to the Milwaukee library. A number of the complete sets were obtained by art dealers years ago, broken up and the individual engravings sold separately for from $50 to $1,000 each, depending upon the subject matter.

"The Milwaukee public library is indeed fortunate and is very grateful." said Krug. "It is the most outstanding gift on the subject matter, either books or pictures, ever received by the library.

"The Audubon paintings represent an important phase of early American history. A majority of the few original sets remaining intact are in bound form and are stored away where the public has little access to them. We are especially happy that the Schlitz Co. officials decided to frame the set, because it will afford the public the opportunity to view and enjoy the great naturalist's work.

"I anticipate that these engravings will create a greater respect for wild life conservation among children and adults. The multitude of Milwaukee bird lovers may now feast on these prints to their heart's content. The set has great monetary value because of its rarity. It has great scientific value because of the accuracy and care with which the artist recorded the natural history he loved in a way which imparts the greatest amount of information. Its high artistic value is self-evident.

"It is a wonderful thing for the library to own these original Audubon prints, and I am especially glad that they are to be made available to the schools," said A. G. Pelikan, art supervisor in the public schools.

"I have studied the original set in the Cabildo museum in New Orleans and I can look forward and see art teachers and students getting the same enjoyment out of the Milwaukee owned Audubon set.

"The gift gives visual education here a big boost. For some time we in the schools have felt that the city was lagging a little in this form of education. The superintendent's committee on intercultural relations has for one of its jobs the identifying of all agencies in the city which offer exhibits or objects able to be utilized in this visual education. The Audubon prints add to the available material greatly.

"The Audubon prints serve a purpose beyond art, since studies of natural history and biology as well as American history are suggested by them."

FROM FATHER TO SON

HOBBIES:

I enjoyed the article in a recent issue which told of the collection of autographs made by Private George Merle Johnson, Jr., and feel that the autograph fans of HOBBIES might be interested in an account of my son's unusual collection. While he has a number of separate items—letters of presidents, etc., his principal collection is contained in a single album. It was started in 1887 for his father, by Mr. Warren D. Young, who was social secretary at the White House for many years. It now contains the signatures of eight presidents—Cleveland, Benjamin Harrison, McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, Taft, Coolidge, Hoover and Franklin D. Roosevelt. Perhaps by now my son has obtained his ninth president, Mr. Truman.

While serving on the War Department General Staff, my son obtained the signatures of more than 25 of the military and naval leaders of the late war, including Generals Marshall, Arnold, Eisenhower, Bradley, Clark, Stillwell, Hodges, Doolittle, Simpson, Somervell, Devers. He also has Admirals Leahy, King, Mitscher, Byrd and General Vandergrift of the Marines. From earlier wars he has General Sheridan and General Pershing. He hopes to obtain signatures of General MacArthur and Admiral Nimitz in his book, to complete all seven five-star officers.

He also has other famous people: Henry Ford, Thomas Edison, James Russell Lowell, Oliver Wendell Holmes, James G. Blaine, John Hay, Charles E. Hughes, Nicholas Longworth, Harlan F. Stone and many cabinet officers from various cabinets.

I feel that the remarkable feature is, that so many famous people have handled this one book. General Eisenhower signed under General Pershing and my son hopes to have General MacArthur sign on this same page, too.

My son's only regret is that his father didn't obtain signatures of Presidents Wilson and Harding to make an unbroken line from President Cleveland, but at that period his father was too busy practicing medicine to keep up the collection, and it was before my son took it over. He hopes to obtain the autograph but it will not be quite the same as if those presidents had actually handled the book.—Helena M. Kimball, New Hampshire.

Old Automobiles, Bicycles, and Vehicles.

The Veteran Motor Car Club Meet Second Day, 1945

By MRS. J. B. VAN SCIVER, JR.

On the second day of the Midsummer Meet, Sunday, July 29, the scene shifted to James Melton's farm near Westport in Connecticut. By noon, the parking field back of the guest-houses was filling up, and soon the members were inspecting his collection of veteran motor cars, which are picturesquely housed in five red barns, set out one after another on the Connecticut hillside.

There are over 80 old automobiles in the collection of this Metropolitan Opera star, and around 50 of them, beautifully reconditioned, were on display. Mr. Melton has unusual, one-of-a-kind motor cars as well as the more familiar models; he has one of the biggest cars ever built, and one of the smallest. One of the enclosed limousine type models is so high that a man can stand up in it without removing his hat. The Stanley Steamer Mountain Wagon, like a big bandwagon, and the huge Oldsmobile, 1911, were among the big cars on display, and the 1898 Locomobile Steamer, and the 1903 Duryea and the 1900 Mobile dos-a-dos Steamer, among the smallest. It was a privilege to be able to examine so many choice cars, fully restored and in such fine condition. The State of Connecticut is now working on plans to build a museum to house this unusually fine collection. One of his more recent acquisitions is an early Pope-Hartford, a small racing car, which is to be re-conditioned for Mrs. Melton's use, and which, along with an early Fiat and a little Lancia, both lately added to the collection, excited much interest.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Melton are

James Melton and J. B. Van Sciver in front of the Cadillac which is towing the 1909 Maxwell Cadillac with 1909 Maxwell on a trailer, belonging to J. B. Van Sciver of Philadelphia.

The cars are entering Merritt Parkway. The sign says "No Trailers," but Mr. Melton is on the Parkway Commission and obtained not only permission but also police escort.

gracious hosts, and entertained the club members at a simple buffet luncheon on the terrace, after which there was a parade of the antique motor cars led by Mr. Melton in his 1907 Stanley Steamer, as the cavalcade drove to New York City down Merritt Parkway and through Central Park, to attend the dinner tendered to the members of the club by the Texaco Company, Mr. Melton's sponsors, at the Park Central Hotel.

This was a delightful occasion and greatly enjoyed. There was a platoon of WAVES present who were also guests of Texaco. The WAVES, members of a well-trained chorus group, later on sang their versions of some of the old motoring song hits on the radio program. The dinner concluded with a few informal speeches, and then the group adjourned to CBS Playhouse No. 3, for the Texaco Star Theatre show.

The rehearsal was especially interesting because it lasted well over an hour and presented so much more material than could be condensed into the half-hour allowed for the broadcast. Mr. Melton drove his red Stanley Steamer out onto the stage and nearly over the footlights, with his locomotive whistle blowing and his bulb horn honking in a fine frenzy of noise and confusion. He entertained us and the radio audience with many song hits from the early days of the motor car, including among them the popular and well known "In My Merry Oldsmobile" and "He'd Have to Get Under—Get Out And Get Under."

Colonel Stoopnagle was his usual amusing self, and created much merriment with his droll jokes and stories. He conducted a sort of "Information, Please" program with Alec Ulmann, Ralph de Palma and James Melton as the "Experts." One of the facts that was brought to light in this quiz was that among old automobile collectors, the most sought-after veteran motor car seems to be the Mercer Raceabout, of 1911 to 1919. The program closed with the Star Spangled Banner, ending one of the most enjoyable, and by all odds one of the greatest programs ever presented by any veteran or antique automobile organization.

BIRTHPLACE OF WILD WEST SHOW

By A. MORTON SMITH

The little city of North Platte, Neb., is the birthplace of the Wild West show, an outdoor amusement enterprise, closely akin to the circus, which flourished for half a century from its beginning in the early 80's.

And Arthur Edward Stensvad, North Platte produce dealer and circus hobbyist, is determined to perpetuate the association of the beginning of the wild west show and its founder, Col. William F. Cody, with his home town.

He is assembling a collection of programs, couriers, posters, photographs and books relating to the Buffalo Bill show along with his circusiana collection.

Col. Cody's residence in North Platte was a pretentious two-story dwelling of the 80's known as "Welcome Wigwam," where he entertained many Indian fighters, army officers, statesmen and writers. His ranch, "Scout's Rest," which served as winter quarters for his show in its early days, Arthur E. Stensvad, circus hobbyist, who is perpetuating the association of the beginning of the wild west show and its founder, Buffalo Bill, with his home town of North Platte, Nebraska.

was six miles northwest of North Platte.

Today, the town house on West Fourth street, has been remodeled into a modern brick dwelling, with little evidence of its former appearance. The ranch, however, now a Hereford farm, remains much the same as it did in the heyday of the Buffalo Bill show. The ranch house is unchanged in shape or appearance and the Indian lookout is still on the roof. The stock barn, where elephants and fine horses were kept during the winter months, now houses cattle, but the elephant and horses stalls are still there and a few tattered posters on the walls, are reminders of the show.

Unlike some cities which have capitalized on the fame of its native sons who have become internationally known, North Platte bears no markers or signs on its highways or streets to remind visitors that the wild west show was born there and that Col. Cody was once a distinguished citizen of the community.

But Mr. Stensvad has gone about collecting Buffalo Bill show souvenirs, and his collection now contains programs of the show dating back to 1885, advertising couriers from 1884, and numerous photographs, posters, newspaper advertisements, letterheads and books dealing with Col. Cody and his show.

In 1882, Col. Cody conceived the idea of presenting an exhibition of daring as an Independence day entertainment for the people of North Platte and vicinity. Pleased with the success of the venture, and the plaudits of his neighbors, Col. Cody was inspired to organize a professional wild west show, with the assistance of Dr. W. F. Carver and Nate Salisbury, and the enterprise made its debut in Omaha in the spring of 1883.

The presentation was an instantaneous hit and after touring this country successfully for three years, Buffalo Bill took his troupe to England, and during the next several years, exhibited in France, Spain, Italy, Germany, Austria, Belgium, and Scotland. Returning to the States, the show exhibited the entire season of 1893 at the World's Fair in Chicago.

For a decade, thereafter, the Buffalo Bill show played cities, towns and hamlets throughout this country and Canada, and again went to Europe in 1903 to repeat its triumphs for a period of four years.

Meanwhile, Major Gordon W. Lillie of the Indian territory, known as Pawnee Bill, emerged as a rival of Buffalo Bill and his show flourished from 1887 to 1908, including a European tour. The two great wild west shows were merged in 1909 and continued as one large exhibition until its demise in 1913.

The year of the merger, the Miller Brothers started on the road with their 101 Ranch wild west show after a successful engagement at the Jamestown exposition. The 101 Ranch show carried on the traditions until 1931, when the wild west show as an institution, passed out of the picture, giving way to the modern rodeo.

Col. Tim McCoy sought to revive the wild west show in 1938 and California promoters made an effort to bring back the 101 Ranch Show in 1945, but neither venture was successful.

The success of the Buffalo Bill and Pawnee Bill shows inspired numerous other wild west shows during the first two decades of the 20th century, and

Metropolitan Announces Post-war Building Program

New plans for a $10,000,000 Diamond Jubilee building program, to make The Metropolitan Museum of Art a "true people's museum, free and informal," were announced recently by William Church Osborn, president of the Museum.

Projected in connection with the Metropolitan's seventy-fifth anniversary, in February, 1947, the reconstruction and expansion program consolidates the proposed new building of the Whitney Museum of American Art as part of the organic whole of five-museums-in-one. New radio and television installations will broadcast the Metropolitan's treasures into every home.

The Metropolitan's many hundred thousands of art objects, valued at between one-half and one billion dollars, depict 5,000 years of civilization. It is the greatest reservoir of art in the Western Hemisphere. Concurrent with expansion, the Metropolitan will systematically rearrange and present these treasures in a way to make them easier to see, study, and enjoy. Moreover future additions to the collections made possible by the Museum's purchase funds will be guaranteed a suitable home.

"The Museum's trustees have worked with New York City's officials on this program for the last three years," Mr. Osborn said.

Francis Henry Taylor, museum director, pointed out that the Metropolitan is the custodian of treasures fully as catholic and diversified in media and subject matter as those of the Louvre and the Vatican.

"We have developed in less than three generations a framework for an encyclopedic presentation of the creative vision of man, which is almost unique," he said. "And we are morally obligated to preserve and enhance it."

As a first step in realizing these plans the City of New York and the Museum will undertake a complete rehabilitation and renovation of the existing structure. This will be part of the City's postwar building program. To pay for galleries joining the Whitney Wing to the existing building, the Museum will seek funds from the public.

"This is the first general appeal to the public since the Museum was established," Mr. Osborn observed. "In less than a man's lifetime, the Metropolitan has become America's greatest of all the arts. But by no means has it reached the point where its trustees and the public can be satisfied. The Metropolitan must now digest its treasures and present them in the manner of 1970, not 1870."

Amplifying this, Mr. Taylor explained how limitations of space and inflexibility of plant have interfered with an interrelated and complete display of the world's cultures. This will be overcome in the new plan.

TRAVEL TALKS

With the return of peace, museums throughout the country will again feature those programs aimed to assist the traveling public. As the transportation situation eases from month to month, the world will once again dust off the old suitcase and set forth for new scenery. In step with this trend, the Buffalo, N. Y., Museum of Science recently inaugurated a series of travel talks, augmented with slides and films. The subjects discussed and pictured included "Java," "Life in the Aleutian Islands," and "Christmas in Russia."

DEATHS

Caroline M. McIlvaine, 77, librarian for the Chicago Historical Society from 1901 until her retirement in 1926, died recently at her home in Chicago. Under Miss McIlvaine's direction, lectures on Chicago history were prepared and delivered to Chicago school children.

—o—

A release from Lincoln, Mass., tells of the death there recently of Julian De Cordova, 94, former glass manufacturer who amassed a $2,000,000 art collection in a castle-like museum, in that town. De Cordova made 12 trips around the world to assemble his collection, which, with the museum and grounds, he gave to the town of Lincoln in 1930. He left the town $1,200,000 to endow the museum.

"These Are the People of Oil"

The Brooklyn, N. Y., Children's Museum calls attention to one of its newer exhibits in a recent release. Prepared by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, it is called "These Are the People of Oil." This display consists of a series of colorful panels including photographs, maps, and explanatory text.

It is arranged in logical order beginning with a demonstration of how, in the course of millions of years, decaying marine, animal and plant matter has been changed into oil; how, today, geologists working on the surface find, with the aid of delicate instruments, the rock formation in which oil is sometimes trapped thousands of feet below the earth; how, by means of chemical and other refining processes, crude oil is separated into fractions, or parts of oil, with different characteristics and uses; how both crude oil and refined products are transported; what variety of surface conditions conceal the oil in the earth; where existing oil fields and possible oil fields are located all over the world; and finally some of the uses of oil.

Exhibitions of this type make us realize that so many things that we take for granted because they are part and parcel of our daily lives have behind them the fascinating story of how man, through study and research, uses the products of nature for better and more convenient living. Another thing that such exhibitions bring us is a broader picture of the kind of work opportunities that lie ahead.

they toured the country under such titles as Buckskin Bill, California Frank, Buffalo Ranch, Young Buffalo, Great Buffalo and the like.

Mr. Stensvad has been a circusiana collector only eight years, but he has amassed so much material relating to his hobby in that time that there is little doubt but that his Buffalo Bill collection will be outstanding in volume and rarity of its items in the years to come.

In 1937, Mr. Stensvad attended the Al G. Barnes circus and purchased a program which he decided to keep as a souvenir. Being a railroad fan, he observed an advertisement in a railroad magazine, offering pictures of circus railroad cars for sale. These two incidents started him in the circusiana field.

Photographs are his specialty and he has an estimated 15,000 pictures of the circus, many of which he has made on show lots with his camera. He believes he has one of the largest circus photograph collections in the country.

His program collection numbers 150 magazines, he has 10,000 route cards, hundreds of pieces of advertising material, letterheads, posters and other printed matter of the circus.

DOLL-LOGY

ITALIAN ENIGMA

By ELIZABETH S. LIEB

Face down on the floor of a rifled storeroom in a Lake Como villa, recently vacated by troops, lay the marionette, a trap for unwary feet. G. I. John, searching through the empty rooms for possible stragglers, picked him up, glanced at his wooden countenance, and, remembering a Central New York collector who would welcome him, thrust him under his arm as he continued his duties. Some months later, this same G. I., now G. I. no longer, brought him to me, with the very appropriate name of "Como," and a warning not to get the "wimwams" from looking up at him!

Truly Como is no beauty, with a turned-up nose that is too snout-like for attractiveness, and a bald head from which the paper hat long since disappeared, yet he is one of the most unique dolls in a collection that has profited greatly from the thoughtfulness of this same G. I. Though he hides the loss of his right hand in his bosom in true Napoleonic attitude, and though two fingers are missing from his left hand, still the innate humor of his character is unmarred, and his cracked glass eyes still gleam with the old quizzicalness of the age-old Punchinello.

The costume he wears is original, and made to be easily removed, suggesting that he has in his time played many parts on the marionette stage. It is woolen, with red vest and breeches trimmed with black and gold braid and black pockets; his long knee hose are ribbed and red; his real leather shoes are shaped over wooden feet with heels attached. The coat is a sort of khaki, trimmed with the same red as the vest, and made with a red stand-up collar and two rows of mock buttons connected with braid in military fashion. Perhaps someone more familiar than I with various traditional marionette plays will know what he represents in such regalia. At one time he had a red paper cap to hide the loop of wire attached to the top of his head, which would control his movements on the stage, but it is gone, and only a bit still stuck to his head on the sides remains. His mouth intrigues all who see him, as the lower jaw is hung on a counterbalance which permits it to be operated by a string in a very realistic manner, so that all that is lacking to make him talk is Edgar Bergen!

The workmanship displayed by my latest acquisition is quite equal, in my humble opinion, to the lovely presipio dolls from Florence and Naples which found their way to my collection through the same agent. Though possibly not exactly a doll, Como is certainly no dummy, and I'm very glad the troops did not seize him as hostage!

The World of Dollology

The Doll Collectors of America, Inc., with headquarters at Boston, Mass., recently observed the club's tenth anniversary with a luncheon and meeting. Members brought favorite Parian dolls for exhibition and discussion. Miss Helen S. Walter, of Virginia, presented an interesting paper for the educational part of the program.

INSECT DESIGNS ON BUTTONS

By
GEORGE E. GOULD

Department of Entomology, Purdue University

COLLECTING buttons with insect designs seems only natural after collecting insects as a part of my vocation over 20 years. My wife started collecting buttons about 18 months ago and discovered some insects on them. This group of buttons soon became my special field and in the past year about 250 different ones have been accumulated. The number of such buttons manufactured is difficult to estimate, but different patterns must number well over 500 as we are constantly finding new designs.

The use of insects as a motif for buttons is difficult to understand, for to most people worms and bugs are repulsive. There are, of course, some beautiful specimens, such as the butterflies and dragonflies, but, on the other hand, flies, bees and beetles hardly seem suitable decorations for clothing. Nevertheless these forms have inspired button designers for a hundred years or more, as indicated by the Goodyear buttons displaying a beetle and a wasp of 1851 or thereabouts. Nor has the value of the button been a criterion as to the suitability of insect decorations, as they occur on cheap buttons for children's clothing and in porcelain, gold and jewels for the most expensive clothes for the ladies.

It is interesting to consider the popularity of the different insect groups represented on buttons and some possible reasons for such popularity. But first we should define an insect so that we may know what type of creature we are discussing. To the scientist an insect is an animal with three body regions, three pairs of legs and usually two pairs of wings. Such a definition immediately rules out spiders as they have four pair of legs and no wings. The term "worm" referring to the larvae of butterflies, moths, beetles, flies and bees applies to members of the insect family, while earthworms and angle worms do not.

Of the 353 buttons listed in my card index, those with butterflies and moths are the most common. This is easily explained as many of them have beautiful colors and graceful lines. Butterfly designs are found on all types of buttons from the cheap tin and pewter to the rare enameled and jeweled ones. The designers were not always too accurate in their insect anatomy and often gave the butterfly extra wings or subtracted a pair of legs. Of a total of 140 buttons in this group only 15 can be definitely classed as moths and most of them are rather drab.

Second in popularity with a total of 61 entries are the beetle buttons. These insects are frequently brightly-colored and make excellent designs for buttons, although many of them such as the Scarabs, the long-horned beetles and the leaf-beetles, are exceedingly destructive pests in real life. The artist has provided two beetles in our collection, No. 1 in Plate 1 and a Colorado potato beetle, with an extra pair of legs, while one pair of legs has been taken from the beetle on No. 15 of Plate 1. One of the largest buttons in our collection is shown in the center of Plate 1. This button has been rather common locally but has not been received on approval cards from dealers nor has it been mentioned in the various button publications.

Third in popularity with a total of 57 is the group containing the bees and wasps. Although many of us have been painfully aware of these insects at one time or another, among them are included some of our most beneficial insects. The honeybee, valued for its production of honey and beeswax and for pollination of fruits and flowers, is pictured on buttons by itself, with flowers and with honeycomb, while its home, the old-fashioned skep or beehive, is pictured on at least three buttons. The bumblebee, noted for its pollination of the clover crop, is shown on several buttons, as are wasps and hornets. One of the most unusual scenes on our buttons is that of a hornet stinging a running rabbit.

The group including the flies and mosquitoes with a total of 56 are almost as popular as the bees. These insects can be distinguished from all others by the presence of only one pair of wings, although the artists have not always been scientifically accurate and sometimes gave them two pair of wings or, vice versa, gave insects definitely belonging to another group only one pair, as for example, the wasp shown in No. 9 of Plate 2. Crummett in her book, BUTTON COLLECTING (now out of print), has a plate of 23 flies. Most flies and mosquitoes are considered annoying and frequently serious pests, as they are known to carry typhoid fever, dysentery, malaria, yellow fever and many other diseases.

The fifth group with a total of 19 are the dragonflies. These graceful creatures are of little economic importance, although they do eat mosquitoes and other small insects. They are usually pictured in some aquatic setting and often have water-lilies and cat-tails in the background.

Grasshoppers, the sixth group, have been seen on six buttons. A seventh group, the Hemiptera or true bugs, can be recognized on only one button along with several other insects. The specimens on buttons Nos. 10 and 24 of Plate 2 resemble the Hemiptera in some ways, but could also be called beetles. Nine buttons have been seen on which there are representatives of two or more of the above groups. Of the 25 orders of insects there are 18 in which we have no representatives pictured on buttons.

Insects are frequently associated with flowers, fruits or other animals on the various buttons. Flowers make an excellent background for the many insects that visit them, while fruits are sometimes pictured with the insect pests that destroy them. Insects and spiders are found together on several buttons and one design, which has been seen in several shapes, has in it a moth, a snake, a crane, a fish, a boat and a pagoda. Animals depicted on buttons catching insects include birds, lizards, spiders and a cat, while a Satsuma button pictured in BUTTON CLASSICS has on it a frog and 16 different insects. Shells and insects are associated on four of our buttons, including one with a ladybird beetle crawling out from under the shell.

On a number of buttons are depicted insects and real or fictitious people. Included here are Ariel, a Shakespearean character with a butterfly (BUTTON CLASSICS, 46-8); Tom Thumb riding a butterfly (B.C. 41-1); Tom Sawyer loitering home from school (B.C. 44-11); Putto or Cupid in flowers reaching for a butterfly (Nichols 1470); butterflies attached to strings held by Cupid; a dragonfly pulling a little girl on a four-wheeled cart; Cupid in chariot pulled by a butterfly (B.C. 99-1); a boy and girl with nets after butterflies (N. 2139); a woman on a dragonfly (N. 511); and a boy and a dragonfly. Some fictional characters, such as Puck or Robin Goodfellow (B.C. 44-4), have wings on their backs resembling those of a butterfly or dragonfly.

The use of insects as designs for buttons is difficult to understand, but perhaps Dorothy Foster Brown* has the proper explanation. She says Hobbies Magazine, November, 1940 "The popularity of butterflies as subjects for button decoration is not surprising. They are colorful, picturesque insects, possessing not unpleasant associations, and like birds, eminently fitted to the ornamental requirements of buttons. Bees, too, while they have their objectionable side are associated in the human mind with pleasant things, such as honey and flowers. But the popularity of bugs that crawl and creep, and of that most despised of winged creatures, the fly, is not easy to understand. I suppose it is all due to that fickle and reasonable female, Fashion, she sets the styles, and other females . . . follow her, and ask no questions."

Miss Brown has made some excellent suggestions as to why insects were used for designs, but perhaps there are additional reasons. For instance the mention of insects in nursery rhymes, songs, fables, fairy tales and fiction may have been the inspiration to the button designer. We do know that many picture buttons have been inspired by fictional characters or happenings and consequently it is reasonable to assume that these same sources have inspired the use of insects on buttons. Aesop in his Fables, for example, mentioned a gnat, a fly, a grasshopper, a beetle, ants and bees. Nursery rhymes make reference to flies, spiders, ladybird beetles and a bumblebee. Tom Sawyer loitering home from school and Ariel from Shakespeare are associated on buttons with butterflies, while Tom Thumb is shown riding one. Of the many insects mentioned in fiction the ladybird beetle has perhaps been used most frequently on buttons, while on the other hand the humble ant, the symbol of industry, is not pictured on any button.

The inspiration of some designs has perhaps come from history religion and mythology. Insects, such as the weevil and the plague of locust (now called grasshoppers), are mentioned in the Bible, while long before the Christian era the Eggyptians worshipped the Scarab or dung-beetle. This beetle was observed by these primitive people rolling a ball of dung during the sunny hours of the day. This fact and the beetle's control over the revolutions of the ball caused the Egyptians to pay divine honor to the Scarab as the representative of Khepera, the sun-god. Scarabs carved in gems and stones were placed on mummies or were carved on tombs as symbols of resurrection. The Scarab symbol was also used by the Greeks and at a later date on amulets by the Romans. The Egyptians also used the honeybee on tombs and writings as the symbol of the king or ruler. The early Greeks used the same word, Psychos, to designate a butterfly and the soul and believed the transformation from the crawling caterpillar to the beautiful winged adult symbolized immortality.

Another possible reason for designers to use insect motif might be a personal experience with some insect. We know many insects are beneficial, as they produce such items of commerce as honey, beeswax, silk and lac; some pollinate fruits, flowers, vegetables and forage crops; some are scavengers, destroying decaying organic matter; some are used as food by primitive peoples; and some are parasitic to destructive pests. Included here are the honeybee, the bumblebee, various parasitic wasps and flies and certain beetles. The honeybee is the oldest animal domesticated by man, while the silkworm has been raised under artificial conditions for so long that none are known to exist in the wild state. It is interesting to note that I have not seen a silkworm or its moth on a button, although the Japanese, to whom silk was a major item of commerce, frequently picture insects on Satsuma buttons.

Perhaps the use of insects was inspired by a personal encounter with some destructive pest. Insect damage to our crops, our homes, our belongings and even our health amounts to many billion of dollars annually.

As an item of interest 400 insects are known to attack the corn plant alone and eight or nine thousand species are listed as destructive. Some of these pests pictured on buttons include: June beetles, leaf beetles, moths, mosquitoes, plant lice, grasshoppers, caterpillars and many others.

Regardless of the reason for their use on buttons they do make an interesting hobby.

PLANETARY INFLUENCE

We sat around the table
And discussed the moon and stars,
The planets Jupiter and Earth,
Neptune, the War God Mars.

The famous cow was seen through glass

Its collet shown like gold,
The rings of Saturn counted,
And tales of Venus told.

And fires of that long ago,
When once the moon had burned.
Astronomy our science? No!
The Button Club adjourned.

We gathered up our buttons,
They had come from every source,
Our planetary studies done,
The Stars had run their course.

SCOVILL BUTTONS SHOW AMERICAN HISTORY

Part of the Scovill collection, (a) thru (f) are buttons used by railroads. Fig. (g) scarcest of collector's items is the solid gold Marquis de Lafayette original, with Washington's head, (h) the Scovill created ordnance button adopted by the army generations ago, (i) is an ordnance button for staff men, while (k) was struck for the Pony Express.

Texas—Republic of Texas of that time used buttons (l) through (q) for their armed forces.

Buttons — The American button history is a full vigorous history of Scovill since 1802. Lately, one LIFE article featured the world-wide button collection of the Los Angeles Button Club — many products of Scovill handicraft.

Now, Scovill button history is really in the hands of American collectors. From these devoted hobbyists, Scovill is gradually gathering data that had been destroyed in their two button shop fires — 1830 and 1881. To add, government officials recently sent generations-old military button contracts with the Scovill firm. These contracts covered orders from 1806 to 1840. Also, data is gained from the LIFE article. Eight of the nine brass overall buttons pictured were Scovill offspring.

One of the rarest buttons in the world is a Scovill creation. Solid gold, these buttons (see cut) were presented to the Marquis de Lafayette by the government in his farewell visit to the U. S. in 1824. Each boasted the image of Washington.

The history of America — even the Texas Republic — is history for Scovill. Buttons for the four ship Texas navy, their infantry and artillery were Scovill products. (see cut.) The Ordnance branch of the army uses a design today that was originally created here generations ago.

To reveal the development of America in buttons is a coming Scovill aim. This exhibition will be shown to all in the near future, a boon to visitors — a revelation to Scovillites.

CLUBS

The Cleveland Button Society scheduled its annual meeting for December 16, and the new officers will take over at the January meeting. The following officers will serve in 1946: President, Mrs. O. G. King; Vice President, Ruth Wood; Secretary, Charlotte Fairchild; Treasurer, Frances Montgomery; Program Chairman, Grace Dexter; Blanche Lower, secretary, presided at the club's auction after the November business meeting. Proceeds from the donated buttons went into the treasury.

Out of the BUTTON BOX

If you are a button collector and have been looking for an efficient way to clean those steel cuts and other not too valuable metal buttons, you might try the directions submitted by Jackie's Antique Shop, Minnesota.

"Fill a small cheesecloth bag half full of buttons. Drop bag into your washing machine when you start to wash your colored clothing. Take out bag before you put in overalls and socks. Rinse bag several times in clear warm water and pin on clothesline to drain and dry."

oOo

One of the most active doll clubs in the country is the Pittsburgh Doll Club which holds its meetings regularly, without fail. At a recent meeting, Mrs. Ralph Freedman of Hawaii talked on her native land and illustrated some of the dances. In keeping with the occasion, small hand-beaded Indian dolls were used as place cards.

Notes of The Chicago Antiques Exposition and Hobby Fair

The annual get-together for 1945 was back home at the Stevens, where the spacious aisles were crowded most of the time, with the peak reached in the evening.

Because of lack of help and space, HOBBIES did not keep a registry this year of out-of-town visitors, but many from afar were present.

oOo

Among those present from the greatest distance were: Agnus Ashby of the Pepper Tree Antique Shop, California, and Grace Elliott of the Beverly Antiques, also of California. Members of the firm of Schulze, Bell and Britz, Texas, were also present.

oOo

First to line up at the door on the opening day was Mrs. Henry A Diamant, of New York City.

oOo

Dr. Gluck of Davenport, Ia., who feared he might miss the show for the first time this year for lack of a hotel reservation, finally landed a room and showed up to enjoy the big exhibit.

oOo

Visitors commented on the high quality of the merchandise offered, and there was enough in the booths of participating dealers to satisfy the collecting urge of everyone present. Some outstanding pieces of furniture were exhibited in the booths of John Chamberlain, Pennsylvania, and Margaret Chapman Little, Illinois. The Burkhardts of Pennsylvania also had some fine, old pieces, to make the heart of the antique lover beat quite a bit faster.

oOo

C. A. McMurray, Jr., Ohio dealer, recently returned from the armed forces, had the misfortune to break several shelves of fine old glass exhibited in his booth. His more fortunate friends immediately passed an antique dish which was soon filled to overflowing with greenbacks, a gesture of goodwill which was appreciated. Hobbies Magazine also donated advertising space to the amount of his loss. We had the same experience in our World's Fair Hobby Shop, overloading a glass shelf with paperweights.

Although there were three last minute cancellations by exhibitors who were unable to get hotel reservations in our very full to overflowing city, the booths were quickly gobbled up by a waiting list of dealers who were previously unable to get into the exhibit because of lack of space.

oOo

L. E. Dicke, who with Mrs. Dicke, had occupied the front booth of the center aisle for several years, was ill in St. Luke's Hospital, Chicago, at the time of the show. Mrs. Dicke, carried on, however.

oOo

It was particularly nice to greet so many returned veterans from many parts of the universe, many of whom turned in their subscriptions to HOBBIES again after a lapse in the service of their country.

oOo

Barbara Stanwyck's and Robert Taylor's fans were disappointed that their plans to be in Chicago during the week of the show were cancelled. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor attended the 1944 show on two different evenings buying antiques for a home they are building, and Mr. Taylor came a third time to look at pieces in which he was particularly interested.

oOo

Mr. Johnson of the Olsen and Johnson team, now currently starred in "Laffing Room Only," Chicago, was never more serious than when he visited some of the booths, where he purchased antiques, notably some very nice pieces of brass and copper. One dealer commented on the speed with which he executed his orders, probably a characteristic of speed and timing gained from several years on the stage.

oOo

It is interesting to note how antique-minded the press is becoming. Several newspaper people were noted purchasing antiques for their own collections. The publicity for the show in all of the dailies was also good, and very generous considering the many national issues that are crowding the pages these days. June Baker of W.G.N., a collector of "hands" in all forms, was among those who were in attendance.

oOo

The Wisconsin State Button Society held a meeting at the Fair and reported excellent attendance. H. O. Zanders, well-known Milwaukee collector, rounded up the group.

After the show some of the birds flew east and some flew west. Some went to the Detroit show and some to the Davenport or Kansas City Shows, all staged the following week.

oOo

Reserve your room now for the Spring Show, May 6 to 10, Chicago hotels will be full of convention visitors all year.

Good Reading

Readers of HOBBIES will find interesting reading in the December issue of the "Ladies' Home Journal" magazine. Henrietta Murdock, Interior Decoration Editor of the Journal, has written a fascinating piece about the beauty and the use of antiques entitled "Pennsylvania Dutch Heirlooms." Along with the story the publication has presented as nice an illustrative layout as it has been the good fortune of HOBBIES staff to see for many a moon. Pictured is a grandfather clock, striped shawls, cupboards, glassware, etc. And what is more, all in a lovely natural coloring.

The reading matter itself is devoted to the use and historical background of antiques, particularly Pennsylvania Dutch articles. The article points out the proper method of starting your collection of antique ware, and, in itself, presents some good rules for the beginner to follow.

HOBBIES recommends this article as good reading for its readers and believes the reading time will be profitably spent.

Irony

Thomas I. Monroe of Tulsa collects canes, but recently when he suffered a knee injury, he had to borrow one for his own use. The reason? Mr. Monroe is 6 feet 6 inches tall — all his canes were too short.

NOSTALGIA

Souvenirs on the Plate Rail

I remembered the dining room plate rail long after its disappearance. Ma used to be proud of those plates. They represented important events in her life.

Birthdays, anniversaries, and trips were commemorated by appropriate plates. Ma's honeymoon piece was a massive 14-inch affair which displayed Niagara Falls in all its glory. The fifth wedding anniversary plate was handpainted, with Pa's and Ma's names and the date lettered around two clasped hands.

Ma was forever comparing her collection with those of relatives and neighbors. She permitted no other person to dust the plates; that was her own weekly job. During housecleaning time she washed and lovingly replaced them.

Later on, to fill gaps, she added cups and saucers. For a lark, Pa placed his handpainted shaving mug among them. Ma said nothing at the time, but when he attempted to remove it for his Saturday night shave, she firmly insisted that it remain there. She had her way about it, too. After that, Pa used an old discarded tin measuring cup.—Alexander Beifuss, in the Chicago Tribune.

Glass And China

Brownfield and Son, Cobridge, England

By THELMA SHULL

ONE OF THE larger potteries in England in the nineteenth century was that owned by William Brownfield and son of Cobridge. This firm made beautiful Parian, fine majolica, dainty porcelain, much pottery, and stoneware jugs, the latter said to be a specialty. Each piece marked with the name of this firm seems to be well made and tastefully decorated.

Concerning the Centennial Exhibition in Philadelphia in 1873 we read, "In pottery, England excelled all the nations in her display." And Brownfields had much to do with the continued success of England's pottery, for their establishment was begun as early as 1836 and continued uninterrupted until the closing years of the century.

The Cobridge Pottery was occupied by various concerns, including Clews, and then closed for some years previous to its reopening in 1836 by Wm. Brownfield, Mr. Wood, and Mr. Robinson, the latter dying the same year. In 1850 Mr. Wood retired, and the works were carried on alone by Mr. Brownfield. With the reigns in his own hands, Mr. Brownfield's initiative and business acumen became evident in the rapid expansion of the works.

At the Exhibition of 1862 in London he displayed some very fine wares. One graceful pitcher had a twisted handle; and the sides were curved with long, frond-like leaves. Among other attractive pieces were compotes with cupids forming the standards, large vases with cupids holding them aloft, and cupids on the base of candelabra. Dainty trinket boxes, tea services, teapots, flower pots, and jardinières were among their productions during the sixties. One very lovely piece was a strawberry tray formed of shells and strawberry leaves with a seated cupid in the centre. A good quality majolica was made also. An elaborate majolica fountain with a large bird on the standard was indicative of the decorative quality of these wares.

One of the Parian pitchers exhibited in 1862 had four raised figures around the sides representing Art, Science, Commerce, and Music. The pitcher was just nine inches in height. Each figure was framed within a scrolled-edge panel and was a woman dressed in classic Grecian robe. Art is carrying a palette and carries in her right hand a brush. Science is represented by a seated figure who holds in her hand the globe or world, and a trylon looms in the background. These two symbols were used at the New York World's Fair in 1939. The figure of Commerce has an anchor at her side and a tome on her knee, perhaps a log of the world's voyage in the realm of Commerce. Music is holding a trumpet and lyre, and a child stands beside her peering from around the folds of her skirt. The words Art, Science, Commerce, and Music are raised in the clay under the panels. This pitcher was truly a souvenir of the finest type, well made and appropriately inscribed.

The raised mark on the base of the Parian pitcher just described is the word International in a ribbon above the English registry mark for 1862 and the Staffordshire knot with the initials W B. Brownfield received medals at the London Exhibition in 1862 and Paris in 1867.

In 1871 a new building was erected for the purpose of making china, or porcelain. Vases, fern stands, breakfast, tea, dinner, dessert, and toilet services were made in porcelain. Oriental scenes and aquatic pictures of water birds, marsh flowers, etc., decorated the toilet services. Comports with the Four Seasons modeled by Protat were delightful productions. Carrière-Belleuse, another ceramic artist of distinction employed here, modeled a vase twelve feet high. Both of these well-known artists had been formerly employed at Mintons.

Parian Pitcher made by Brownfield and exhibited at the London Exhibition of 1862.

This same year, 1871, Mr. Brownfield's son, William Etches Brownfield, was admitted as a partner. Two years later the father died, and the factory was still further enlarged under the son's management. Twenty or twenty-five years later the son experimented by changing the works to a purely cooperative basis under the name of Brownfields Guild Pottery. This was not a successful venture, and the pottery closed about a half century after the Brownfield family had begun to manage it exclusively. After the closing, the plant was reopened again by Wood and Brownfield.

Various marks used by Brownfields include W & B, W B, or W B & S, the entire name, or Brownfields Guild Pottery, England.

PLUME PATTERN (See Cover)

The cover of this issue pictures a collection of pressed glass in the Plume pattern, which is one of the hobbies of Ferne Smith, Wisconsin. Mrs. Smith has this to say about her collection:

"I chose the Plume pattern because it combines beautifully with modern candlesticks, china of all types, no matter how few or how many pieces I use. Not alone do I enjoy using it, but my family, and friends greatly admire the pattern."

"I have 70 pieces with several more on order. I have procured this pattern in every eastern and middle western state except west of Colorado. They have come from antique shops, second hand stores and private homes. I have made many good friends and learned a lot where I have bought it."

"I have been 18 years finding my goblets, only to find two in one shop, bringing my total to a 'lucky thirteen.'"

"The picture shows:

- 2 large covered compotes,
- 12 flat saucers,
- 8 footed saucers,
- 2 square bowls,
- 2 flat round bowls,
- 3 small compotes, no covers,
- 13 goblets,
- 2 tall celeries,
- 1-9 in. cakestand,
- 1-10 in. cakestand,

- 1 tall fruit bowl, a lovely piece.
- 3 finger bowls,
- 1 creamer,
- 1 spooner,
- 1 covered sugar,
- 1 covered butter,
- 2 canoe shaped relish dishes,
- 1 crimped edge fruit bowl.

"The pitcher shown is not Plume, however, there are three distinct types of goblets, some etched, others plain. I have not found any pieces other than goblets, however, which are etched.

"In all pieces the Plume encircles the dish except for the celeries, in which three Plumes run upright and the edges of the pattern form the graceful scalloped edge, and the relish dishes in which the Plume runs the length of the dish, in the bottom. Each piece on a standard has three Plumes upright (on the standard) broad at the base and tapering to the bowl portion of the piece. Even the goblets have three minute Plumes extending from the base to the stem.

"The covers of the compotes, butter and sugar have the Plume encircling the lower edge forming scallops which overhang the body sections. The footed sauces, the round bowls, butter dish, and finger bowls have a delicate crimped edge for a base. The water pitcher, really a graceful piece, is hard to find.

Friendship Table

How often am I reminded

Of friendships that are mine,

While setting the dining table

With plates of gay design.

And a fav'rite bowl, handpainted,

Some dainty napkins too,

And a pair of candleholders,

A vase of rosy hue.

And so this treasured collection

Of gifts that came to me—

Becomes a friendship table

Of richest memory.

—Hilda Butler Farr, in the Chicago Tribune.

CUPS AND SAUCERS

MRS. FRANKLIN Daege of Gary, Indiana, is one of the hundreds of cup and saucer collectors throughout the country. Mrs. Daege has followed the hobby diligently, studying as she went. She divides the collection into groups: the souvenir type, states, profiles and numerous foreign countries. She says:

I have really enjoyed my foreign cups the most and they are unusual in design and also in colors. For instance one from Yugoslavia has a circle of red, white, and blue around the edge of cup and also the saucer. I was told that this is representation of their national colors. A Laveno, Italy, cup has a picture of an Italian girl on cup and boy on the saucer in colors. Another marked from Austria is a plain white cup with small orange flower design. Limoges is represented by a pink cup with raised gold leaves around base of cup and center of saucer. I have five blue ones from France which have love scenes in small circle on side of cup. And what is so unusual is that each scene is different. I also have a blue willow pattern made in Holland. Then there is a very dainty cup, light green coloring on the outside, and inside is gold; it stands on four small legs, is marked H & C. Czechoslovakia. Another is very outstanding because the saucer is solid black and the cup is a very brilliant orange.

Most of the English cups are of very thin china and are of gold and white in color, or faint shades of pink or blue. I have one set of six eggshell colored Coat of Arms cups from England. Pictures on saucers as well as the cup include Holborn, See of London, Fulham, Stepney, All's Well, and Duke of Bedford. I have been able to get only one cup from India which is of metal and a little larger than an ordinary demi-tasse so I have my doubts as to this belonging in my collection. The one Chinese cup in center upper shelf of photo is very interesting as the cup itself is deep and has a round base stem which gives it height; on the side is the picture of a Chinese woman. The most recent addition to my collection is one of a light blue and white design with hand out edges in form of scallops. It is from the Ming Dynasty.

Souvenir Type are mostly those having very little designs on them, with only names in print on the side of the cups including Yonkers, New York, Buffalo, N. Y., Galveston, Texas; Nashville, Tenn.; and an odd oval shaped one with picture on saucer of Niagara Falls marked on bottom, Victoria Carlsbad-Austria; I also have three cups and saucers alike; lettering on saucers read, H. M. M.-B. A. 20th Annual Convention May 23, 1899, Chicago.

States include one with a picture of Carleton College of Northfield, Minn., another of St. John's Lutheran Church at Jefferson, Wisc., Hotel LaSalle in print on side of cup; Post-Office, Milwaukee, Wis., also picture of high school of Freeport, Ill., U. S. Grant Residence of Galena, Ill., and the soldiers monument of Indianapolis, Ind. All of these are attractive cups, most of them being made in Germany or Austria for these different states.

The first cup I bought was a very small one with a picture of a child's face painted in colors on the side of the cup. The next was the profile of an American Indian on side of cup, and the saucer has raised designs of bows and arrows on it. Other profile cups include those made in England of Queen Bess, Shakespeare, and Disraeli.

The Publisher's Page

A letter from one of our important advertisers reads as follows:

"Too many readers of HOBBIES order from advertisements carelessly, thinking they can always return what they have bought that is not a great bargain. Mr. Lightner owes it to the advertisers in HOBBIES to discourage such conditional buying. Above everything else, he should insist that the seller be consulted and his permission obtained and his instructions for shipping before any piece is sent back."

We have at different times admonished our readers not to send orders in these times just on the possibility that you might want something. Read descriptions carefully and be sure you want the object you send for. Labor and packing material is high now, and dealers should not be imposed upon by being asked to ship with the idea that you can reject on whim. There may be a little of that type of buying, but we do not think there is much. On the other hand, the fact that a lot of people will take their loss on a deal, rather than go to the trouble to complain, far offsets the whim buying. We doubt if we would go to the trouble to complain to a magazine. Our policy is that if there is not a lot involved, we let them get the best of us, figuring that it did not break us. We bought them cheap, and we do not have to have any more to do with them.

On the other hand, we have received letters from some of our best readers who feel that they should not be imposed upon. We want the readers to complain. You only encourage irresponsible dealers if you do not complain. That is the only way we can keep a check on the deserving as against the undeserving.

We find that where both the buyer and seller are careful in their description and the wording of their representation, very little grief arises. Both are in earnest. The buyer is glad to get the article; the seller has made a legitimate profit. Both are satisfied. It is those who are careless and cannot come to an appreciation of the value of a mail order business who have grief with complaints. Both may be to blame, but the dependable dealer is one who is willing to take an occasional piece back if the buyer is dissatisfied.

Of course, there are two angles to the point of not shipping the article back until they first correspond with the advertiser. Ordinarily we would say that would be the proper procedure—that the buyer should give the dealer a chance to explain. However, the buyer points out to us the fact that if they keep things too long, they have, to an extent, lost their legal rights. Claims must be put in within thirty days at the most, and business houses of all kinds are fast bringing that limit down to ten days. If the buyer writes about some dissatisfaction, the seller may claim that he was out of town or did not get the letter on time and that the claim cannot be honored for that reason. That is why buyers sometimes ship goods back at once.

Others tell us that there is no possibility that the shipper could explain anything. They positively do not want the goods, and the shipment went back, even if they lost every dollar they paid. We can imagine that when a buyer would rather lose his money than have the stuff, there is the best chance that there are grounds for his indignation.

There are advertisers who have thought that because they spend maybe $10 a month with us, we should take their part. That position is absolutely out of the question. If you spend $10 with us, we do not make 50c profit on you. In fact, if we made 5% on our turn-over through the year, believe us, we would be making far more money than we do make. The truth is, we do not make 25c out of that $10 ad, but you must remember that we have close to 2,000 advertisements a month—big and little. Even if we made 50% profit on your money, we could not afford to take the part of the advertiser. If our readers are dissatisfied, they will throw the magazine in the wastebasket, thinking it is full of gypps. Then the ads will not pull because the reader has lost confidence. Next you would be quick to tell us that the magazine does not pull and desert us like rats off a sinking ship. We must insist that the reader be satisfied, and we do not want to accept your ads under any other conditions. Remember, the reader pays his share of the cost of publishing. Our source of revenue is divided half and half, the subscriber, paying a fair share of our revenue makes us independent, to a certain extent, of the advertiser. We turn down lots of advertising here, far more than anyone imagines.

The time is now here when little magazines imitating HOBBIES will spring up in every section. Before the war several started, but every year just as many went out. Today we received a letter reading in part as follows: "I received a copy of a four page tabloid sized paper carrying collectors' ads, and it looked like a grocery store throw-away. They claimed to have 10,000 'readers', and since I work for a publishing firm, I know that this sort of statement means nothing."

We see these magazines and some times are tempted to dissect one of them for the benefit of our readers. They are full of advertisers whom we have thrown out of our pages. It would be interesting to take the ads in one of these magazines and then publish letters about them we have in our complaint file. If any of you folks have an idea you would like to start a collector's magazine, please write us, and we will furnish you with a list of people who will give you an ad right away. Then they will start gyping your readers so that you will soon be out of business.

There will always be plenty of clean advertisers, just as there will be plenty of good-faith buyers. They have found that they can carry on a mail order business between them that is profitable, pleasant, and satisfactory to them both. We want to act as their organ. Let HOBBIES be the rock. All other ground is sinking sand.

oOo

Advertisers desiring a HOBBIES office box number must confine their copy to a one time appeal and the nature of it must be that the answers will be limited. We cannot allow a box number to carry on an entire antiques business as some have done. This not only necessitates too much work in our office, but telegrams and even checks come to us directed to that box number. Naturally, this causes delay. A check made payable to a box number would not be cashed by a bank.

Such advertisers should get a box number in their local Post Office. Some say that they do not want to be bothered with callers. Your Postmaster will keep the matter strictly confidential. Those are his instructions.

From our standpoint, and for your own good, ads pull better if the reader at least knows where you are located, even if temporarily he does not know your name. You would be surprised at the large number of people who refuse absolutely to answer a blind ad.

oOo

The Roosevelt stamp collection is about to be sold at auction. Some of those stamps were issued illegally, and the buyers ought to be warned that some day they will be seized. Many sheets were given Mr. Roosevelt by the Bureau of Engraving which were freaked up in some manner. Just the same, they were United States postage, and the Bureau officials had no more right to give them to the President without payment than they had to you or me. If some employee had been caught snipping those out, he would have gotten several years.

In talking to the best lawyer philatelist we know, he remarked that if the stamps had been left to the public in a museum, there probably would have been no sentiment to prosecute, because there would have been no evidence of intentional wrong doing. "However," he said, "when such issues are sold for the benefit of the family, there will no doubt some day be a prosecution in the case."

It is only a question of time until we get another Grover Cleveland or Theodore Roosevelt in the White House and then we will be convinced that the President is not above the law, and that he, of all people, should strictly obey the laws of the country and not assume the attitude that "the king can do no wrong."

oOo

It looks like the help situation will gradually straighten itself out, although it is a slow and tedious process. During the past month we got back from the service one of our old printers and one of our old linotype operators which helps us materially. We also got some good cooperation from readers of HOBBIES, although we are greatly handicapped in bringing outside people here because of the housing shortage in Chicago. Thousands of veterans are coming back here with no place to live. Public places are filled with cots, and it is impossible to furnish people moving to Chicago with a house, apartment, or even a room.

We have had invitations from other communities, where there seems to be plenty of help and housing, to move our plant there. However, at this stage of the game that is too much to undertake. It would entail the very work that we must avoid.

One thing we had determined upon was that we would never go through another four years like the past four years. We would rather sell out and retire than to undertake it. The help situation is looking better, and we are going to keep publishing HOBBIES if we can do it without living a dog's life.

READERS!

EARLY AMERICAN PRESSED GLASS will be delivered in January. The following letter just reached me from the Ferris Printing Co. of New York City, who are equipped to print books into the millions of copies:

"Dear Mrs. Lee:

Earlier this year, we promised you, in good faith, to have the new and enlarged edition of Early American Pressed Glass in your hands in ample time for distribution for Christmas.

Due to unforeseen circumstances plus great delays due to the shortage of materials and man power, we are indeed sorry to advise you that the new printing will not be available until January, 1946.

That we have to advise you at this late date has been occasioned by our earnest attempt to meet our promise to you.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) P. M. BLAND."

The failure to be able to fulfill orders is not the fault of the Ferris Printing Co., or mine. Every possible effort was put forth but presses have stood idle due to lack of skilled labor.

NOTICE!

VICTORIAN GLASS is available in the 4th edition. It contains 265 pages of illustrations, picturing between two and three hundred patterns collectible in sets not shown in my first book. Also novelties such as 500 glass slippers, 400 pairs of vases, 500 glass hats, match holders, animal dishes, etc. $10.00

HANDBOOK OF EARLY AMERICAN PRESSED GLASS PATTERNS, is in press now, in the 12th large printing. Publication date will be announced when the books are ready. $2.00

SANDWICH GLASS is being enlarged. Publication date cannot be set now but it will be ready during 1946. No copies available now $10.00

ANTIQUÉ FAKES AND REPRODUCTIONS will be revised and enlarged during 1946.

ORDER FROM THE AUTHOR RUTH WEBB LEE — NORTHBORO, MASSACHUSETTS

News From Washington

A special postage stamp commemorating the one-hundredth anniversary of the admission of Texas to statehood was placed on first-day sale at Austin on December 29, 1945.

The central design of the 3-center comprises the American flag with a ray shining from the twenty-eighth star to the single star of the Texas State flag.

Osteopathic Christmas seals for 1945, fifteenth in an annual series, have just been issued by the Osteopathic Student Loan Fund Committee of the American Osteopathic Association.

Proceeds from sale of the seals are used to help worthy students complete their education in approved colleges preparing osteopathic physicians and surgeons. The seals are available in sheets of 100 for $1, and may be purchased from osteopathic hospitals and colleges or direct from the Osteopathic Student Loan Fund Committee of the American Osteopathic Association, 139 North Clark Street, Chicago 2, Ill.

Bernard Harmer, of H. R. Harmer, Inc., New York City, reports that at a recent stamp auction a block of four stamps of $1 denomination were sold for $128. This is a new high for that stamp series.

The stamps were especially overprinted in 1919 in Newfoundland to commemorate the first successful transatlantic flight by Alcock and Brown.

The end of the war has brought about resumption of activity in cachets and first-day covers.

M. F. McCamley of Oregon, who was quite active in furnishing cachets from ships is sending out circulars showing that he is on the job again preparing special covers having naval background.

FUTURE OF ROOSEVELT COLLECTION OF INTEREST TO STAMP COLLECTORS

There has been much printed in the press concerning the future of the stamp collection of our late President Franklin D. Roosevelt. Various clubs have gone on record with resolutions concerning this collection which is perhaps the most unusual stamp collection ever made in America.

Besides having a personal interest in stamps and stamp collections for years before he ever became president, during which period his collection was much along the same lines as other collections, Mr. Roosevelt came into a position where he had the opportunity to receive from our stamp making bureau many things which if they should have come into the open market from any source would have created great excitement and a possible investigation as to their source.

Through his office as president of this great country he also received gifts from the rulers of many foreign lands. Knowing his interest in stamps, many of these gifts were in the form of stamps and frequently no doubt, he has received partially finished stamps, proofs, essays and items not issued in a general manner. This material if put into the market would bring big prices, but worst of all it would possibly cause the catalogers to list many things not heretofore listed in the catalog. These items would not be actually issued stamps, yet the catalog publishers have always had a habit of trying to load anything that they could pass for a stamp into the catalog.

It would seem high time that some definite plan be adopted to avoid just what might happen if these Roosevelt stamps were turned loose in the market. We have no objection to anyone who wants to collect essays, proofs, prints of partially finished stamps and the like but we do believe that for the best interest of our hobby that such items should not be listed in our catalogs of issued stamps. Why not adopt a policy in listing, that nothing shall be listed except stamps that have been placed on sale in the usual manner in postoffices, or other government agencies, in order that the public might purchase same for usual use.

The adoption of such a plan as this would eliminate much from the catalog and the time is coming, if not already here where we should strive to simplify our hobby rather than to bloat it with anything that can be dragged out of the cellar.

Definitely, the Roosevelt collection should never be broken up and put into the stamp market unless, before this were done, a committee of experienced Philatelists should cull from the collection every item which is not a regularly issued stamp and place such material in a museum where it will not come into the stamp market.

IT SEEMS TO ME

By FRANK L. COES

Spotty Supply

The sudden exposure of the 13-cent Special Delivery Philippine, over printed "Victory," will make used copies on cover very interesting, because that item is very short. It is in fact, much shorter than the dealers admit. Of course in mint, there will be enough to go around, maybe. On cover used, well, have a try at getting one.

The supply of some of the other values of that set seems to be at least "spotty."

Pacific War Theatre Map

The conversation about the "Pacific War Theatre" might mean that someone will make a map big enough to use on the desk and small enough so it will be single or double page size for the album.

Such a map can be elaborated only enough to cover important things, but how we need it! And when you find one that is usable, hang onto it and spread the news.

Stamps of France

That the listing of the stamps of France could be improved, or at least better titles could be found for the early series.

I have recently seen a self-built French collection which was subdivided "The '49 Republic," "The '53 Empire," "The '70 Republic," and finally the ante Franco-Prussian series headed the French Republic since 1870. Now the owner has queries of another Vichy section and the "Restoration" section. But the grouping, which follows the factual changes, is much easier for the student, the onlooker tyro, and the older visitors who have memories as well as a mixed mind as to those things. The text books do not agree. The names used in them cancel each other out, by inadvertence maybe, but they surely do not help. And the next "history" books will doubtless mix up the student even more because of omitted datings and simple facts.

Maybe your own "France-Continental" could be improved by a remount and some sub divisions, and now is the time to do it. Look it over. Why not, in your own book, have the sub-divisions follow the historical section, and repeat for each division?

It won't upset you much, maybe you can do it by merely re-sorting the mounted pages. But it does help the student. Especially the one who begins his France at 1899-1900.

Which has nothing to do with getting a copy of Scotts No. 155 (ground under feet) Sower. The supply of these seems suddenly short. Might be someone is trying to make a corner. The catalog price seems foolish now.

New Phases

It is difficult, and unprofitable, to quote club conversations. But sometimes they show new phases of collecting interest. Recently the overprinted or replacement issues for over-run Pacific areas has come up. The Japanese substitute issues for the Philippines should be material of more than passing interest. It took the catalogs 20 years or so to list the Aguinaldo issues. But they are in. So now, maybe the replacement issues will be included eventually. It is recommended that you find and clip such description, and cherish the data. Perhaps you might find some.

A stamp student in a western college suggests that every area has enough unlisted data in it to warrant a questionnaire on that country alone. He suggests I print one. Maybe this is not the best way, because then the area would be marked as "already done" and it might reduce study. Would it not be better to appoint some person who would be willing to list and send to Contest Committees enough questions for a period. It should be easy and perhaps profitable. Some of our best pen pals originate from small and unusual questions by the natural flowering of interest.

Right up this alley: "How many Geese are portrayed on stamps?" Don't all speak at once.

Another says, "How many pianists, violinists, and general musicians do stamps show?" That one takes some doing.

The overprinted, two-cent envelopes do not seem common, either incoming or elsewhere. Why? There are plenty, somewhere.

Every Man For His Own Hobby

No doubt everyone saw the article about the Museum of Hobbies, and its owner, in the Sat. Eve. Post of more than a year ago.

Nice to see the publisher we all approve, in his natural colors, and as for the Museum's contents, that is a delight beyond words.

Only somehow, there was no frame of postage stamps in color. Too bad.

However the real laugh was the assurance that the "buttonists" will eventually replace the Philatelists. Could it be? Well, even a similar threat by numismatists sort of flopped.

Style

There are many definitions of "style." Few would believe style entered into collecting, but it does. Just now there is a trend toward areas long discarded as even interesting.

The boys at the club illustrate that. One group sets up "the Countries that border on the Pacific." Another group fancies "The Allies and the Conference." Still another is intrigued with "Pan-American Union countries" and now crops up the "Over-run Countries," following our Flags issue. Style? Nothing else, and all based on areas that have been snooted by the "overcoat office peddlers," and neglected even by those that knew there was interest and research opportunity in them.

Lewis Carroll's Stamp Case Brings $66

Lewis Carroll invented the "Wonderful Postage Stamp Case," an 1890 version of today's pocket stock-book.

One of these quaint cases turned up in New York recently. It contained a set of Great Britain's 1881-84 stamps from the ½p to the 1sh, the 6p being used; a slip with pictures of Alice and a booklet by Carroll, "Eight or Nine Wise Words about Letter-Writing," published by Emberlin & Son, Oxford, in 1890.

This copy of the Carroll "Case," with enclosures, was sold for $66 in a recent auction of H. R. Harmer Inc., New York.

TEXAS STAMP

A special postage stamp commemorates the one-hundredth anniversary of the admission of Texas to statehood. It is a 3-cent denomination, which was scheduled for first-day sale at Austin on December 29. Buchanan Winn, artist of Wimberly where he has a ranch-studio, designed the stamp.

NUMISMATICS

NUMISMATIC THOUGHTS

By FRANK C. ROSS

Our Paper Money Is Tough

U. S. BILLS are just as tough as our G. I. Joes. After the Pearl Harbor incident the government called in all the paper currency on the Island and replaced it with a special Hawaiian issue to prevent Japan from profiting at our expense just in case they should invade and take over. It has been a moot question among numismatists as to what the government did with the bills called in. The writer Frederick C. Othman (UP), in one of his releases stated that as it would have cost more to ship the money, approximately $70,000,000 in bills, back to the United States than to burn it, the government decided to hold a bon-fire. They consigned it to a cemetery crematory, but coming in tight packages it only charred it instead of burning it to ashes. It was then sent to the furnaces of a sugar refinery on a large plantation. The refinery ovens were equal to the task, and in about two weeks all the pre-Pearl Harbor currency was in ashes. The government, he says, would not divulge the amount destroyed, but it was estimated by the "firemen" to be about $70,000,000.

Nicotine Bridal Currency

We remark "how ridiculous" when we read of uncivilized and semi-civilized peoples buying wives with a special type of money used for that purpose instead of the conventional civilized custom of courtship and wedding rings. We should not laugh. With them the groom pays the bride's parents, with us the bride's parents "fits her out" and often a dowry goes with it. When Virginia was being colonized the men out-numbered the women many to one; to remedy this situation England sent shipload after shipload of eligible young women as brides for the lonesome Virginia gentlemen. The men did not put on a Courtship of Miles Standish act, nor did the women assume a Priscilla attitude. These women in most instances, were not formally introduced to the gentlemen, nor were they wooed, wedded and "ringed" by the gallants; the ships were met at the wharves and the brides-to-be paid for at the prevailing price of 150 pounds of tobacco each. The spear (or other form) bridal money of the semi-civilized should be no odder to us than our tobacco bridal money to them. And the "bought" wives of that day turned out in practically every instance to be model help-mates.

The Friendly Nickel

Constant association breeds content is possibly the reason for the popularity of our friendly little coin, the nickel. Next to the cent, the nickel is the most used and most familiar of all our coins. Its greatest handicap is there are so few distinct types, making a type-collection so small. There are six distinct types, stars between rays, stars without rays, V with cents, V without cents, buffalo-Indian, Jefferson. But they have one advantage, every type is of a beautiful, well balanced design. The buffalo-Indian design is of special historical interest, typifying as it does the hunter and the hunted of the Western plains. However, to the more ambitious collector, the number of variant patterns make up for the few accepted types and varieties. It looks as if the artists used pattern nickels as tryouts for their talents. They were struck in copper, bronze, nickel, aluminum, silver, and on different, sized planchets. Although there was a prejudice against placing the heads of presidents on coins, both Washington and Lincoln appear; one has "God And Our Country;" another bears the word "Standard;" "Pure Nickel" appears on another. To show "what little nickels are made of" one of the pattern varieties bore the identification "75c-25," certifying that it was made of 75 parts copper and 25 parts nickel, while another with its "50N-50C" acclaimed to the world it was a fifty-fifty, half copper and half nickel.

"Favorite" Coins

WOODS COINAGE; copper coins struck in England (1722-1724) for Ireland; rejected in Ireland and sent to America. This is the cold, statistical record of the coin. Now for the story behind the coin.

The Rulers had their lady "favorites" in royal circles, and it was the prevailing custom for the royal boy friends to "sweeten" their inner-circled girl friends with expensive gifts. George I of England was enamored of the Duchess of Kendal and wished to "sugar" her. He did not want to dig into his own pocket, and feared the reaction of his subjects if such an item appeared in the government budget, so he decided to let Ireland foot the bill. The Duchess was granted a contract to furnish coins for Ireland, not that she knew anything about the minting business, and not that Erin needed or desired the coins, but to save "talk" in Court circles if the Duchess received outright such a large cash sum as a present. As pre-arranged, she immediately sold her contract to William Wood, an expert in that line, for ten thousand pounds cash, giving it all the ear-marks of a legitimate business transaction instead of a pre-agreed subterfuge. The perpetrators probably eased their consciences with "the end justified the means," but the Irish considered it a mean way to accomplish the end.

called the Triune (three in one), three legs, equally distant, running, some bearing the motto which translated means "whichever way you throw it, it will stand," show some of the triunes with its legs running to the left, and the legs of others to the right.

"HAVE A SEAT." The general appearance of coins, size, metal, shape, has varied little down through the ages. When in the early stages of our coinage we first asked Miss Liberty to have a seat, we did not set a precedent, we followed one, for the design of a seated figure has appeared on coins from their birth down to date.

oOo

CONDER PENCE, England, 18th century token, was so called because a Mr. James Conder published a book cataloguing these tokens.

oOo

KIPPER COINS. Kippermunzen; clipped coins, seventeenth century, in circulation in certain parts of Germany; also applied to debased currency.

oOo

FOLDING MONEY. London claims the largest collection of bank notes; over 40,000 notes from more than one hundred countries.

oOo

BIG BEN'S correct time is regulated with coins. If Big Ben, London's famous time-piece gains or loses time it is regulated back to par by taking off or placing a penny on its weights.

oOo

PENNSYLVANIA TOO. In the trapping grounds of early Canada and our own Great West animal skins were used very freely as currency. In early Pennsylvania beaver pelts were used for money.

oOo

SOUVENIR HUNTERS. Our boys over there are known as Souvenir Hunters. They are "robbing" the old countries of their knick-knacks. But they will now have to share this honor with their Russian co-pards. Hal Boyle in his report of the meeting of the fighting men of the two countries at the Elbe said "The Russians only seemed to want souvenirs; the prize souvenirs were American dollar bills or U. S. insignia of any kind." They did not want the bills to spend, but to take home as souvenirs.

Miscellaneous

"Ancient coins are regarded by sensible leaders as leaflets of history. No matter how debased, degraded or abraded, if at all legible, they are full charged with the most reliable facts."

oOo

Back your memory up with a scrap-book. Don't depend altogether on memory for it is subject to black-outs.

Keep pasting, keep posted. As the little boy said, "Memory is the thing you forget with," so paste your memory in a scrap-book as insurance against a fade-out; or, as the Chinese say, "Don't paint your pictures on water."

—o—

George Washington was first in War, First in Peace, and First in the Hearts of his countrymen; and the Washington 1932 quarter dollar was the First in quarters that showed no stars.

—o—

Clipped coins and counterfeits used to be called "black money"; was this the grand-daddy of the present day term "black market?"

oOo

Some of the early English shillings had a rose behind the bust of the Queen to distinguish them from coins of higher value. Coin shysters would remove the rose and then pass the coins for those of higher value.

oOo

Freling Foster, Colliers, says the largest sum of money reported lost in this war through a disaster to an American Naval vessel was the $500,000 payroll in the vaults of the U. S. S. Chicago when it sank off Guadalcanal in January, 1943.

oOo

Worth more than face value to its owner. Capt. Robert S. Johnson, an American ace flyer, always took a farthing coin with him on his forays.

oOo

Money buys married happiness. Brides in Esthonia throw small sums of money on the fire for good luck when first entering their new home.

The Poltava Double Rouble of Russia

By RAYMOND J. WALKER

THE POLTAVA DOUBLE rouble or medal was issued by Peter the Great in 1709 to commemorate his victory over Charles XII of Sweden at Poltava. The medal is now extremely rare and was highly prized by the Russian veterans of that battle because the award stipulated that it was not to be parted with under penalty of death.

The obverse has a fine bust of the great czar and the legend: "Czar Peter autocrat of Russia." The reverse shows a battle scene and has the legend: "For the battle of Pultawa (Poltava)."

The hypothesis of madness, which usually prefaces an account of the life of Charles XII of Sweden is superfluous as well as false. He was a boy who took adventure seriously. He had a hero—Alexander the Great. He was born to rule and somewhere in his makeup was the Viking strain that sent Gustavus Adolphus into Germany with a small army to fight against enormous odds. The Vikings believed in the religion that everything, gods and men and matter, would end badly. With such a background it is not strange that Charles beat Denmark into submission and overthrew Augustus of Saxony in Poland.

Both Denmark and Poland envied the Swedish possessions on the east and south shores of the Baltic. Russia wanted that region in the vicinity of what is now Petrograd, or Leningrad, the name depending on one's political complexion. The Swedish counsellors were old and life was too sweet to risk a war. Like Neville Chamberlain, in recent years, they told the young king, lolling in his seat, that his country must yield. This was the first, and nearly the last time they heard Charles speak. He took his head from his arm, rose up as stiffly as possible, as said in Garboian tone: "Gentlemen, I have resolved never to make an unjust war, but to end a just one only with the utter ruin of my enemies. I will attack the first to take the field, conquer him, and then deal with the others." With only the life of Alexander for a military guide, Charles embarked on the strangest and loneliest military feat in history.

Denmark was defended at every vulnerable point by strong fortifications. There was one unprotected point, Flinterend, the unnavigable part of the channel of the sound. It was across the Flinterend that Charles descended on his enemy and was within four miles of Copenhagen before the Danes knew what it was all about. Within two weeks he could have annexed Denmark, but he was an Alexander and could not stop. He fought with Augustus and Peter, not with Poland or Russia. Peter had invaded the Swedish possessions on the Baltic before he received significance of the news from Denmark.

Peter's army of 80,000 men rolled on as far as the Swedish fortress of Narva. When he heard the news from Denmark, Peter went for reinforcements for he was not the type to take chances. To Charles, his army of 20,000 men seemed superfluous. Leaving most of them to follow him in forced marches, without delay, Charles dashed off for the death-trap of Narva, with about 4,000 horsemen and the same number of grenadiers. The roads were frozen but in three days and nights he had arrived at the outposts of the Czar. The Russians were not expecting an army of tattered ghosts but they opened fire. A spent ball dropped into Charles' cravat. Another killed his horse. But he kept on. The Russians trampled each other to death in the rout.

RECOLLECTIONS OF AN OLD COLLECTOR

By THOMAS L. ELDER

The Coin Chorus

The chorus goes up for coins and yet more coins. Dealers are paging the country for collections, wanting to buy. It all emphasizes how coin collecting increases and multiplies by leaps and bounds.

Former small advertisers become page advertisers, ads in journals increase in size. The coin appetite grows, prices also grow and swell. In the old days, the Scott Copper & Nickel coin books seemed to quote enormous comparative retail prices for the different issues. Now even those prices seem low and obsolete in many cases, some of them now buying prices instead of selling prices.

Stories could be written about every denomination showing marked increases, while there are no decreased prices in any one line. Even tokens look good and are going up. Look at the transportation token series, some common looking tokens in this class bring dollars apiece where once they went begging for cents.

Some collectors are making frantic appeals to buy certain classes. If they could only buy what they want all would be well. But it is certain they cannot do so. It was as late as 1943 that the writer sold a shining, almost new, old U. S. half eagle of 1803 for $21. How about such a coin today? Well, 50 to 60 dollars is asked for it and received. It shows how times change. In 1943, fine old half dollars of 1795 went begging for five or six dollars apiece. Now they go at $15 to $25 apiece. It proves collectors don't always know values or what and when to buy certain classes, with sometimes a very evident complete absence of appreciation of possible future values of things.

As for coins like one and three dollar gold pieces, a good article can be written on their present status and their past records. Some time ago the writer wrote an article on threes and stated they were the rarest U. S. gold coins. The proof is offered in the almost entire absence of threes from ads and sales in the last two or three years. And so coin collecting goes merrily on, and with a bang.

Ten Dollars For Any Gold Dollar

You may smile at this title but it is not such a vague unreality. Almost any uncirculated nice gold dollar is fetching $7.50, sometimes $8 at auction. The coins have become very scarce and there's a scramble on for them, particularly uncirculated ones.

Remember the Lincoln S. VDB cent? Some years ago they sold at 25c each, and nobody can say there were not a good many of them offered for sale. The writer, back in 1909, had thousands in bags at 10c each.

About three years ago the cent market commenced to tighten up; it rose to a dollar, then two dollars, then four dollars, five dollars. Now it is almost off the market, while new ones bring twelve dollars per coin.

Shades of old timers like Chapman, Frossard, Low, Steigerwalt, of the era of face-value gold dollars would turn in their graves at the present trend. The few which old time dealers hold are reserved for old customers, while new ones get few or none.

The day of $10 for any nice new shiny gold dollar is most certainly coming within the near future.

"Auctions"

There are "auctions" galore of both Coins and Stamps. Some of these are done by mail only. Time was when there were only three men in the entire U. S. cataloging coins for auction. Those were Ed Frossard, Sr., Lyman H. Low and the Chapmans of Philadelphia. The writer joined them in 1903 and held more than 300 auction sales of coins, all but five or six of them public sales with an auctioneer. So the writer knows auctions as well as anybody and has held some of the most important. His best records were made at the Dr. Lawrence sale in June 1929. His last sale was a "mail sale" held in 1940, since which time he has definitely quit the auction sale business, in fact he has about quit all business whatsoever and is doing very little indeed but taking care of his health and writing articles for HOBBIES.

"SOMETHING YOU CAN SPEND"

By FRANK C. ROSS

Perfection Born of Experiment

Gold, silver and copper have been the chief coin metals for generations. The taboo on gold, and the commanding of silver and copper for war purposes have made for new metals in our coins, medals and tokens, and with so little time for experimenting some of the new metallic productions have not stood the test any too well. Great care must be taken in choosing metals and alloys for coinage. When states began making tax tokens several metals were tried out, with aluminum seemingly proving the most satisfactory. Missouri, in deference to its chief mineral product, used zinc, but it proved a dud; the zinc tokens soon became dull and drab and the very sight of them brought germ incubators to mind. Missouri now uses plastics, as do several other states, and they prove eminently satisfactory. In early days our coins were worth their weight in metal, but the one cent pieces were too large and cumbersome, and after experiments a small bronze piece was decided on. Not being worth their weight in metal, they might be termed "tokens." The wisdom of the substitution is evidenced by the bronzes still being used. When silver declined in price, instead of enlarging the size of the silver coins to meet the lowered price, we allowed them to become "tokens." Of late there has been considerable agitation to change from silver to some cheaper metal, giving the government a large profit on its coinage. There must and will be a lot of experimenting before a substitute is chosen, but one thing is sure, steel is out of the question. Steel was thought favorably of before we experimented with our steel cents; but our drab, dirty looking steel pennies have thumbed-down that dream. The average person has no idea of the experimenting that must be done in selecting new metals and alloys for coins, nor the time and care in preparing and selecting new designs to go on the coins.

Mr. Joseph W. Schmandt, Kansas City, Mo., one of the West's foremost numismatists, with a major-plus coin collection to background his numismatism, has proven his devotion to his hobby by donating to the Kansas City Museum, from his large collection, a set of small-sized English coins, a type set of United States coins, and a type set of United States Commemoratives. Each specimen of Commemoratives is accompanied with complete information of its history which will be of special benefit to those viewing the collection. Along with the information about the Columbian coins is a picture of the house in which Columbus was born and a street scene of Genoa, his birthplace. The type-set of United States coins will be of special interest for it comprises practically a complete history of United States coins from the establishment of our first mint down to date, and can easily be kept up to date by adding new types as they are struck through the years.

The Kansas City Museum, visited annually by thousands of the townspeople, is a sort of shrine for the many tourists passing through the city, and the coin display will do much to further numismatic interest. It is to be hoped Mr. Schmandt's civic pride, his generosity, and his desire to be of help to others, will set a precedent for like-minded collectors, and that numismatizing our museum will become a numismatic habit.

Collectingly

Coin Clubs should hitch their wagons to a star, not anchor them to a lamp-post; no one ever got very far standing still.

Date vs. Condition. The long debated question whether the fine condition, or the date of a coin sets its value was answered by a window-gazer during National Coin Week. The party said "I have a very, very valuable coin at home; I know it is very old and very valuable because it is so badly worn you can't read the date on it."

Coin Mottoes. Nothing is more interesting than translating the foreign languaged mottoes on coins and medals. The E Pluribus Unum on our coins is probably the only one you are familiar with. Try it out on your other coins and medals. For instance, do you know that the word Dirigo on the Maine commemorative half-dollar is the State's motto, and is Latin for "I Direct Or Guide."

Collectors should learn early to take care of their coins or tokens, well housed and free from accidents, for an injury to a coin always leaves an inefaceable scar, and sickness a tell-tale mark. Paper money requires even more care than coins for they are so easily creased and torn. Use common sense in handling coins, and "Common sense," as the Salina (Kans.) Journal says, "is wisdom in overalls."

In speaking of Scotsmen as champion "coin hoarding collectors," and we don't mean old coins, we do them an injustice. Andrew Carnegie and John McDonogh, both Scotsmen, gave away millions of dollars for libraries and public education.

A coin collection built from the ground up, the hard way, like self-made wealth, is appreciated; a quickly acquired bought collection, like newly-rich wealth, usually brings out the snobbishness of the newbies.

oOo

A bill is something congressmen pass through but seldom pass up.

oOo

The world's largest coin collection according to Ripley was that of Ramesses, King of Egypt, the richest man who ever lived, who accumulated a fortune of ten billion dollars.

Study your coins; every coin, like every man, is a volume if you know how to read it.

"Rob Peter to pay Paul." Is that why so many more children are started out in life with the name Paul than with that of Peter.

It is claimed the United States government has distributed 5,600,000 pamphlets and other publicity warning against counterfeit currency.

In 1934 a Turkish law gave the Turks a family name, including the Ruler Ataturk, and the event was celebrated by placing Ataturk's portrait on a coin.

A self-made (counterfeit) coin is like the average self-made man; it's not difficult to the Almena Plaindealer to detect the self-made man; too much cheap labor is bound to show.

Mr. F. Bauman of Pennsylvania has a freak Jefferson nickel of 1941. The head of Jefferson is entirely missing, while the other side of the coin is in perfect shape. How these "accidents" happen would quizzle the Quiz Kids. Most "freaks" occur in the pennies, but they occasionally are found in the upper brackets. Has some one a Monticello-less nickel to match Mr. Bauman's Jefferson-less one?

INDIAN RELICS

Early Inca caps, beautifully colored. These are among the choice and rare pieces in the exhibition "Art of the Americas." These pieces are said to be from the Tiahuanaca I. Culture, Southern Peru. The material is woven wool.

Pre-Columbian Material Featured at Cleveland Museum of Art

"Art of the Americas," one of the most notable gatherings of Pre-Columbian material of Mexico, Central and South America, opened at the Cleveland Museum of Art, on November 8 to remain through January 6.

It includes more than 200 of the most prized objects, excepting a few whose bulk and weight make transportation impracticable, lent by foremost collectors of the country, including the American Museum of Natural History, the Honorable and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Museum of Cranbrook Academy of Art, Detroit Institute of Arts, Albert Gallatin, Mrs. James Cole Gruener, James Hansis, Heeramanek Galleries, Frederick Knise, Metropolitan Museum of Art, Mrs. Malcolm L. McBride, Minneapolis Museum of Art, Charles L. Morley, The Honorable and Mrs. R. Henry Norweb, Peabody Museum of Archaeology and Ethnology, Harvard University, Dr. Alfred M. Tozzier, Museum of the University of Pennsylvania, Mrs. George C. Vaillant, Wolf-ram V. von Schoeler, Wadsworth Atheneum, and John Wise, Ltd.

The Cleveland Museum's own collection of this material is a notable one, including purchases from its J. H. Wade and James Albert Ford Memorial Funds; with gifts from The Hon. and Mrs. E. Henry Norweb; Edward B. Greene; Guerdon Holden; Miss Helen Humphreys' Memorial to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Humphreys; and Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Wise.

The period covered ranges from the Late Stone Age to the coming of the Spanish Conquistadores. While many of the early cultures in this hemisphere reached extraordinary stages of development in certain directions, especially those of the Aztecs in Mexico, the Mayas in Central America, and the Incas in South America, none has left a written record. Historically we have to rely upon a word of mouth tradition covering over a thousand years told by Indians to their white conquerors nearly 500 years ago, and by them haphazardly recorded. From this mass of half-fairy-story legend, archaeologists, anthropologists and historians form a factual narrative. Just one thing is certain that the art of these peoples was surpassingly fine.

"If the archaeologist is confronted by extraordinarily complex problems," says William M. Milliken, director of the Museum, "the art lover is released into a new world of strange, rare beauty. Only now do we realize that the art of the western Hemisphere can stand on its own feet. In 'Art of the Americans' the Museum attempts to bring together high spots from this all too unsuspected world of beauty."

ALONG THE TRAIL

E. A. Mac Lennan, Illinois, writes of the discovery of Indian mounds on the Ben Poci farm on the Rock River, east of Sterling, Ill. There are approximately 20 mounds, according to Mr. Mac Lennan, and the site is being inspected by Arthur Fry of Sterling.

BOOKS ON WHALES AND WHALING

By E. LEE DORSETT

Fortunately, books on whaling and whales are not very rare or expensive, but there are a few that are rather hard to obtain because of the limited number printed. Some of the most beautiful ones and those that, to me, are the most interesting can be obtained for less than ten dollars. Old maps, books on the early voyages and old books on navigation are often rare, and hard to obtain, and are in most cases expensive, especially if they are in the original editions. Whaling prints are rare and high priced. Those prints of Currier and Ives, the Russell prints by Bufford and many others are very rare. Several Life Insurance Companies have put out some very attractive calendars with whaling prints, but, of course one likes to have the originals. An interesting addition to books on whaling is made if a few whaling implements such as the harpoon, lances, and blubber knives are added, to say nothing of sextants, octants, spy-glasses and compasses. But be careful—you may go too far! Scrimshaw, that fascinating carving that is on the teeth of the sperm whale, can be made a special hobby in itself, but it is just a little off the beaten path. One or two will give color to the book collection.

I keep a detailed card index file of all my whaling books. The card lists a complete description of each book, from whom it was purchased, the date of the purchase and the price paid, together with any other items of interest pertaining to the book, such as the subject or the author. In this way, my books are fairly well cataloged. Besides this list, I keep a file of all other books on the subject that are not in my collection, a record of dealers, and auction prices.

There has never been a complete list of all books and pamphlets on whales and whaling published, and I doubt if there ever will be one printed. Charles Lee Lewis' list of Whaling Books printed in his book, "Books of the Sea," contains only 46 books and there must be at least more than ten times that number. I have listed more than 300 and have 200 of them in my private collection.

What are the most prized items in this collection of mine? The manuscript logs of the whaling ships. These are real, first editions, and they were not copied from some other manuscript, printed in limited editions. In the Whaling Museum in New Bedford there are approximately 750 original manuscript logs of whaling ships. Their custodian, William Tripp, is always willing to permit any careful person to study these precious records of bygone days.

Two of these logs are in the queer writing and spelling of men gone forever. They were deeply religious, at least most of them, but they ruled their ships with a rod of iron, and there are many indications that members of the crew were given "twenty lashes" for breaks in discipline. These records were written in a very impersonal manner—a day by day record of the weather, the sea, the winds and tides, the number of whales seen and killed, the latitude and longitude was recorded nearly every day so that is a very simple matter for the reader to take down his map and to follow the voyage of the ship day by day and in this way be able to "spot" the ship's location exactly on the map. One of my favorite logs is that of the Whale-ship Alexander, Chase Master. This ship sailed from Nantucket in 1821, rounded the Horn into the Pacific, then to Hawaii and on to the Sea of Japan and returned to the home port after an absence of more than two years. She brought back $65,000 worth of whale oil and bone. My Number Two favorite is the log of the Whale-ship Robin Hood of Mystic, Connecticut, which left her home port on October 8, 1845, rounded the Horn and stopped at Valparaiso and then to the whaling grounds off the coast of Chile. The Robin Hood then went into the South Pacific in search of sperm whales and then on to the Hawaiian Islands where she unloaded some of her oil for shipment back home. After refitting in Hawaii she sailed West into the Sea of Japan, Northward skirting the Kurile Islands and entered the Sea of Othotsk, which is behind the Kamchatka Peninsula, being the first American ship to enter this body of water. In the Sea of Othotsk the Robin Hood captured a number of Right whales. After spending some months in these waters she returned to Hawaii and then sailed northeast, skirting the Aleutian Islands, turned Southward along the coast of Alaska and the coast of New Albion (Oregon and Washington), California and the Western coast of South America, again rounded Cape Horn, finally arriving home after a voyage of two years and eight months.

Antique Type Book

A book that brings joy to the heart of any collector is Old-fashioned Type Book just brought out by Frederick Nelson Phillips, Inc., 305 East 45th Street, New York City. The preface shows a blank perforated wall motto on the crochet type which is featured in antique shops generally today. The general text has much of interest to collectors in every line. Most interesting of all, however, are the old time type faces that are being featured so much today in advertising.

It was a wonderful idea to bring out this book, and it is one that we can most heartily recommend. Lack of space precludes more detail, but our unqualified endorsement will take the place of many words.

A Chapter in the Life of Joseph Manton Gunmaker Extraordinary

By RALPH FISCHER

THE NAME of Joseph Manton is one of the greatest, if not the greatest, in the history of the development of firearms, in my opinion. No serious student of this subject can go very far without running into his name. He was born in 1766 and died June 29, 1835. For the next 50 years all of the foremost writers and authorities on firearms spoke of him in the same hushed and reverent tones that modern authors use when they mention J. M. Browning.

In 1801, the Rev. Wm. Baker Daniel published a large, three-volume work which he called "Rural Sports, by the Sporting Parson." This met with such success that in 1807 he had the second edition printed with a few changes and additions. In 1813 this was followed by a fourth volume that he regarded as a supplement to the other three volumes. In this fourth volume he described very simply in a French phrase meaning "additional information." This episode in the life of Manton is largely quoted from volume three of the second edition.

The Reverend deplores the fact that the artillery of that day is smooth-bore despite the fact that it has been shown that rifled guns are far superior in the field of sports. He then goes on to quote from the works of Mr. Robbins, an English artillery officer and capable mathematician who published his work "Principles of Gunnery" in 1744. This work was so far in advance of the times that it was neglected by all save a select few, for nearly a century after its publication. The following is Rev. Daniel quoting Mr. Robbins. (The capitalization is that of the Rev. Daniel or Mr. Robbins.)

"Whatever State shall thoroughly comprehend the Nature and Advantages of Rifled Barrel Pieces, and shall introduce into their Armies their general Use, will by this means acquire a Superiority, equal to anything that has been performed by the Excellence of any kind of Arms, and little short of the Effects which we read to have been formerly produced by the first Inventors of Firearms."

From this point on the Sporting Parson himself takes over. It may be naturally asked, why the above improvement was not called into practice, and nothing can more properly explain the reason than mentioning the circumstance that arose from this ingenious discovery.

"Mr. Joseph Manton, of Davis-street, was the Inventor of the above Alterations by the Rifling, and confining the Shot fired from Cannon by the aforementioned Wooden Cup, whereby the striking the Object was rendered almost certain. By soaking these Cups in water, Red Hot Shot might also be employed; neither did the Rifling enlarge the Bore, so that the Present Shot might be used the same as before the Guns were rifled. In the year 1790 Mr. M. applied for a patent for the rifling and improved loading of cannon and his Majesty had signed the necessary Warrant for its passing, when the Duke of Richmond, then Master General of the Ordnance, wrote to, and desired to see him. His Grace, when waited upon, was anxious to know the Nature of his Inventions; and upon the Duke's giving his Honour that he would take no Advantage of the Communication, Mr. M. explained the principle of the Cup, and the manner of its Action, and which his Grace thought would be of infinite Importance to Government, and wished to see some Trial of it at Woolwich, where a number of Experiments were accordingly tried before his Grace, who was so highly pleased with the Accuracy of the Firing, (Vide the Plate) that he requested to be informed what M. would take for his Improvements. M. replied, that he could not give an immediate answer; and he afterward desired his Attorney to get the Patent passed. This was stopped in the present Lord Melville's Office, (at that time Secretary of State) by the Duke of Richmond stating that Government meant to purchase the Invention; and M. finding it impossible to get his Patent, although before it was in a State of Forwardness, and there was no Demur to it, saw the Duke of Richmond, who offered him five hundred pounds for his Improvements. M. said he would sooner make his Grace or Government a Present of them, then take a Sum that would not reimburse his Expenses: to this the Duke remarked, 'if he did not choose to take that Sum, he might get the Patent as he could'. After much loss of Time in attending Mr. Dundas's Office, and finding that neither his Patent nor any Reward was likely to be obtained, Mr. M. went to Goodwood and agreed to take the Five Hundred Pounds provided he should also have the Contract for supplying Government with the Cups, and have the Rifling of their Cannon, which his Grace assented to: but M. soon received a Letter with the Inclosures, viz. Extract from Major Blomefield's answer to a letter wrote by the Duke of Richmond to him on the 6th September 1791, and a short note from his Grace to M. These Letters were to the following purport

SIR,

"Mr. Manton has lately been at Goodwood, and has agreed to accept of Five Hundred Pounds for his Invention of the Cup, and the manner of rifling his Guns; and as he was desirous of a final Answer, I judged that the Experiments already made had sufficiently ascertained the utility of these Inventions to allow him that sum on account of the Ordnance, and to let him do as he pleases about taking out a Patent to secure his Invention from other People. He is also to have the Contract for making the Cups and rifling the Guns, but it is to be at such price as can be afforded to be done by other Persons.

"I shall be much obliged to you to consider what Guns, or other Pieces of Ordnance, this invention of rifling can be with advantage applied to and at what price the several sorts ought to be done by a Person who should contract for it.

"I will also beg of you to send me such particular descriptions of the Rifle and of the Cups to be entered in the Agreement, and as may fully secure to Government for this reward the utility of every part of Mr. Manton's Invention. With respect to what further Experiments you may judge necessary for ascertaining the utility of this Invention, and any improvements that may be made thereon, Mr. Manton may be required to attend them, and give all the Information in his power relative thereto, in consideration of the above reward; but I judge, that being possessed of the Invention, we ourselves can try what Improvements may be made in it.

I have the Honour, &
(Signed) Richmond
To Major Blomefield

FROM HIS GRACE THE DUKE OF
RICHMOND, TO MR. JOSEPH
MANTON.

GOODWOOD, 15th Sept. 1791

"Sir,
"Inclosed I send you an Extract of a Letter I have received from Major Blomefield of the Royal Artillery, by which you will see that the first step to be taken is for you to allow Major Blomefield the free use of the Gun you have rifled, and to show him your Apparatus for rifling Guns, and acquaint him of your manner of using it.

I am, Sir,
Your most obedient,
Humble Servant,
Richmond, &

The EXTRACT was as Follows:
"I have the honour of your Grace's Letter of the 5th instant concerning Mr. Manton's inventions, and shall, upon his making known to me the Nature of his Apparatus for rifling, and the manner of using it, order some of our most skillful Workmen to estimate the expence attending that Operation, which I shall report to your Grace, describing at the same time the Machinery, in order to secure to Government the exclusive advantages arising from it, should its principle appear to be new.

"With regard to Mr. Manton's Cups, as they have been constructed at the Royal Laboratory, and will probably be supplied by that Department, your Grace will receive the most satisfactory Information respecting their Construction, and of the Price at which they can be made, from the Officer under whose direction the work was carried on.

"As your Grace has been pleased to order Mr. Manton so liberal a Reward, I presume he can no longer have any Objection to our being allowed the free use of the Gun which he has rifled, nor to our being supplied with the Cups which your Grace ordered upon the Field Officer's recommendation, which will enable us to form a more decided Opinion upon this Subject, and also lead to a Determination what pieces it may be advisable to rifle for further Experiments.

Telecast on War Armor

Contributions made to armor protection for the armed forces by the Metropolitan Museum of Art's arms and armor department was the subject of a recent radio telecast.

Head and body armor for United States bomber crews and infantrymen were shown together with their original models hammered out in the museum's armor workshop. The protective pieces include an Air Forces helmet of one-piece skull cap with cheek plates, groin armor for infantrymen against land mines, and body armor consisting of front and back pieces, frontal apron, and neck defenses. Colonel Rene R. Studler, chief of the small arms development section of the Ordinance Department, appeared in the telecast with Stephen V. Grancsay, curator of arms and armor at the museum and co-designer of the new armor. Leonard Heinrich, museum armorer, demonstrated the beating out of a modern neck piece.

Invasion Money

Italy—I have enjoyed HOBBIES very much and have obtained many new pieces for my collection since being in Italy. When the serviceman returns from overseas, there will be many more dyed-in-the-wool collectors, which should be a boon to all hobbies and dealers. Postcards and stamps seem to head the list, with insignias coming up second. Prices on the above items are usually cheap in the newly occupied towns. As soon as there is a demand for a certain item, prices advance. Many times the retail price is out of the question but the "souvenir" hunter pays the price. Enclosing some Allied Military Currency and old type of Italian money that may be of interest to you.—S/Sgt. Allen Kiasen.

We Want Them Back

Michigan—Another year has rolled around and still the boys are not home. I needs must ride my hobby harder than ever. Keeping up an interest in something means the difference between driving friends away or drawing them to us —when we need them the most. Let's hope the boys still find a twinkle in our eyes when they come home. HOBBIES gets better every year.—Mrs. Leo G. White.

Brings Joy To Wounded

Florida—Nothing could make me part with it and the joy it brings our wounded soldiers at Boca Raton Field after I have finished with them is most gratifying. They ask especially for them so I really send them down long before I am ready to give them up myself.—Edith Carroll Crane.

Marianas Islands—My copies of HOBBIES have been arriving quite regularly out here. May I take this opportunity of complimenting you on your truly fine magazine. It is by far my favorite.—Lt. John G. Murray.

Wants To Stop Lending

Louisiana—I am enclosing my renewal check. Please forgive me but I am sending two subscriptions for friends who also enjoy the magazine. I do not want to be selfish with my own copy, but sometimes I cannot pass it around in time to suit everyone.—Louise I. Beatty.

Need for Clear Thinking

Washington—I am enclosing my check for $5 for renewal for two years. Enjoy HOBBIES very much and the first thing that I read, on receiving it, is the editorial page. I wish there were more thinking Americans like Mr. Lightner.—Mrs. Harry Newton.

Avid Collectors

Michigan—We want you to know how thoroughly we enjoy the magazine, both of us being avid collectors of anything old.—Mrs. A. R. Couchman.

Kentucky—Please renew my subscription. Your letters which are published in the magazine would increase the stature of your magazine if you occasionally gave us some panning of your policies. You get them, don't you?—Mrs. Benj. F. Logan.

The Home Hobbyist

Kansas—HOBBIES has been my "moral booster"—with my only son in the Pacific and an invalid husband who keeps me at home. With HOBBIES, I can do my collecting at home.—Mrs. M. E. Everett.

Fell at First Sight

Illinois—It seems as though most people like to tell how they came by HOBBIES. My first one was sent in error to a small town. A friend of mine who runs the post office there asked me if I would like it, as I had been collecting for about two years. It didn't take me long to send in a subscription. I certainly do enjoy it.—Mrs. M. W. Rife.

We Heard Rumors

New York—Am so glad of a chance to tell you what amazing progress HOBBIES has made in the past year or two—as if you didn't know.—Mrs. Esther Broadhurst.

Made Wealth of Friends

New York—I have been taking HOBBIES for two years and am delighted with it, especially the sections on buttons and antiques. What a wealth of friends I have gained through my button collecting. May your magazine enjoy many more years of prosperity.—Mrs. Marguerite Beach.

Sends Thanks

Mississippi—HOBBIES is a wonderful magazine for collectors, and all of us collectors owe you a vote of thanks for carrying on under the trying wartime conditions, as you have done. So here's my vote of thanks.—Mrs. Lewis A. Thames.

Neighbors Enjoy It

Pennsylvania—Have bought some lovely things from the ads. I share my copy with neighbors, and they, too, get much pleasure from it.—Mrs. Jay Fuller, Jr.

Enjoyed the Show

Alabama—Anything I can do to keep HOBBIES coming in these strenuous times I'm more than glad to do for it helps in all the many hobbies I pursue. Am always thrilled when a new copy comes through. I happened to be going through Chicago in November and had a wait between trains from 1:30 P. M. to 9:30 and spent the entire time at the Antique show. Sure did enjoy it and made a few purchases. — Mrs. R. R. Hicks.

Keep Prices Normal

New Hampshire—I'd like to express my appreciation of your views in trying to keep your subscription price the same even though so many apparently believe you should charge more. It is refreshing to have one luxury actually within reach. I was sorry to read that you feel you must regret having tried to keep going during the war, and I hope you will have many evidences of appreciation for supplying a monthly bright spot in the midst of all the darkness. I was personally, by comparison with so many others, practically untouched by the war. Yet I feel so weighed down by all the surrounding tragedy; so I am sure that those who were most affected by the war must feel toward you a gratitude they can scarcely express.—Elizabeth Carlisle.

Wants Prices Quoted

Kansas—I want to make a suggestion to those advertising. Some of them merely list the things they have for sale without telling the price asked. Time after time, something I wanted would be listed. I would write about the price and get an answer. Then by the time I would get my check to its destination, I'd get it returned saying the piece had been sold. It has happened so many times that in reading the ads now, I start out and if the price isn't mentioned, I just skip it and go on to the next list.—Mrs. John W. Davis.

A What?

Massachusetts—HOBBIES is a great magazine, full of interest and most absorbing. May you continue to publish a gee whizzaker every issue.—John A. Young.

Made Good Sales

Tennessee—I have had very good results from ads in recent issues and through them have made many pleasant as well as profitable contacts.—Mrs. Jim Fanner.

Nostalgia

Kansas—What Paul Gaines of Minnesota wrote asking about Miss Flakus made me homesick for her department. It was a clever, entertaining section. Let's hire her back—(See last letter on page 115 in October HOBBIES).—Jessie Muck.

He Knows

Pennsylvania—As to waste in war factories, O. C. L. doesn't know the half of it. I worked in them.—Lyle L. McMahan.

Goin'

California—Your magazine is a "must." We do not want to do without it. The place where we had our Trading Post for four years has been sold out from under us, and we are ordered out. So, we have folded up and are going traveling. Where? What difference does that make? There is a lot of America yet to see and a lot of antiques yet to find, so we're "just goin'."—Guy O. Glazier.

Valuable for Library

New York—Our patrons are very much interested in antiques and read HOBBIES here each month. During the year, two people who were settling estates involving antiques used both old and new copies for a check on values; and also corresponded with some of the firms who advertised in your magazine.—Swan Library.

It Helped Her

Vermont—I don't know how you have kept HOBBIES going during these war years. If it has been a bad time for you, you have made life much better for some of the rest of us for which, for one, wish to express my thanks.—Anna S. Lutman.

BELLS

RING OUT

An Associated Press report from Antwerp recently, stated that the British steamer Lys had just docked there with 765 tons of Belgian church bells stolen by the Germans. Among the bells were two seized in World War I.

oOo

Following the declaration of peace, Percival Price, University of Michigan carillonneur, announced that he was going to Germany in an attempt to save the stolen carillon bells of Europe from the scrap pile. He forgot to mention that his object was to return the carillons to their rightful owners.

As a result of the announcement, says a release from Ann Arbor, Price was swamped with requests from persons who asked him to bring some of the bells back to the States for their churches, schools, farms, clubs, and some asked them for collections which they are forming. Although the professor wanted to accommodate well meaning persons he says that most of his inquirers "didn't seem to realize that most of the bells would weigh anywhere from four to ten tons apiece."

Bell made from Japanese ammunition used in recent war.

WAR BELL

Olive O. Jury, bell and doll collector of Pennsylvania, submits this interesting bell picture. The bell was made by a G. I. Joe from Japanese ammunition taken from the Japs during battle. It appears as if three different bullets were used in the bell's construction. The inside clapper is a

Tells the Story of His Town With His Bells

A history of Marblehead, Mass., is said to be told in the bell collections of one of its local officials, Finance Commissioner Fred Peach.

There are three school bells which summoned past generations of Marblehead to school, and some of the older citizenry remember these specimens well.

There is another specimen which brings many memories to collector Peach. It is from the school which he attended in 1885. There are several other school bells in this collection.

Before Marconi was conducting experiments with air waves to carry radio programs, Marblehead merchants recognized the value of sound as a means of vending wares. Heralding the approach of the bean and brown bread wagon in yesteryear is a bell which once adorned a baker's horse. According to Mr. Peach, the delivery cart made the rounds on Sunday morning.

That this town had quite a maritime past is revealed by a 60-pound ship's bell taken from one of the Grand Banks schooner of the Henry F. Pitman fleet, which reached its peak in 1850, surviving the disastrous gale which virtually destroyed the fishing industry thereabouts in 1849.

Another string of bells in the Peach collection was worn by Joe Martin's stallion, employed to haul water casks to Marblehead's fishing fleet in 1860. It has all the notes of the scale.

One of the local tycoons of the 1870's had a classy driving outfit judging by one fine string of sleigh bells in the Peach bell assembly.

All that remains of some of the churches and schools are bells which Marblehead's enterprising bell collector managed to retrieve.

NATURAL HISTORY

Oriental Dance From Crab Shells

That Art is first of all a creative gift, unlimited in its medium, was recently proved by an exhibition of the charming and delicate sculptures of Miss Drago, an Argentine artist. Using only shells from the seashore held together with silk-wrapped wires she has fashioned groups of delightful figures, employing every natural irregularity in form to achieve the utmost subtlety of expression.

The picture shows an Oriental dance in modern style, completely costumed in the shells of small crabs. The slender feelers make the graceful, trousered legs of the Grand Sultan's beautiful harem while the potentate himself wears a turban and elegant full robes of the crab's back. The exaggerated arms are of silk-wrapped wire.

You Would Weigh Millions On Some Stars

Imagine a cubic inch of material weighing 620 tons per cubic inch. Impossible, you say? Well, a lot of the stars in the sky are made of material just like that.

Dr. Dirk Reuyl, of the University of Virginia, told about such stars in an issue of the Scientific Monthly. He stated that one "white dwarf" star is made up of such exceedingly heavy material. The star is only one-eighth the size of the earth but it is nearly three times as heavy as the sun.

If you were to pick up an object on the surface of the star, you would expend 3,500,000 times as much energy to do so as you would need on the earth. Or, putting it differently, a 110-pound girl would weigh 385,000,000 pounds on the star. This star is, incidentally, the smallest one known to man.

On the earth the atoms are relatively far apart, because of the presence of tiny particles called electrons surrounding each atom. On the star, however, the electrons have apparently been stripped away, making it possible for the atoms to be packed much more closely together.

The San Joaquin Elk

The San Joaquin Valley Elk (Cervus nannodes), known also as the Dwarf Elk and Tule Elk, is restricted to California. It formerly ranged throughout the San Joaquin and Sacramento valleys, also westward through the Cuyama Valley into Santa Barbara County and through Santa Clara County to Monterey.

As a result of persistent persecution the great herds became reduced almost to the point of extermination. A small band, the last of the race, took refuge on the ranch of Miller and Lux in Kern County. Here at the present time, near the town of Buttonwillow, the last remnants of this herd to be found within their former range are confined in an enclosed refuge. Several small bands have at various times been introduced to other portions of the state. At present there are a small number of these elk in Colusa County, in Monterey County and in Owens Valley.

At certain seasons these elk resorted to the great tule swamps; hence the name "Tule Elk," used to distinguish this species from the larger Roosevelt Elk which inhabits the humid coast belt north of San Francisco. The Tule Elk, in addition to being smaller than any other North America species of elk, is also decidedly paler.

Official Wedding Anniversary List

HOW DO YOU RATE on a "Wedding Anniversary Quiz"? If she asks you the sixty-four dollar question, can you reply?

After you pass the Fourteenth, you are in the "Big League," and this is how the anniversaries are celebrated. Parties are given by friends and relations and presents are the order of the day.

The FIFTEENTH is CRYSTAL. Of course, it really doesn't have to be true crystal, but there isn't anything nicer than lovely gleaming crystal on a table set with fine silver and china.

The TWENTIETH is CHINA. In the big league, you see, you change the pace. Up to Fourteen, every anniversary is celebrated - Paper; Cotton; Leather; Books; Wood; Iron; Copper; Bronze; Brass; Electrical Appliances; Pottery; Tin; Aluminum; Steel; Silk and Linen; Lace; and Ivory. This completes fourteen years. Then beginning with the Fifteenth, celebrants are supposed to be mature, so anniversaries are celebrated only every five years. The Twentieth, as we stated is China, and this covers everything from a priceless piece of Chelsea to a new modern American breakfast set.

The TWENTY-FIFTH is a very notable mile stone, and the SILVER ANNIVERSARY is always the occasion of really beautiful gifts of silver tea sets, coffee sets, goblets and wonderful candelabra.

The THIRTIETH is PEARL, and usually the bride and groom give each other lovely pearl pins, rings, shirt studs and earrings. Often the family gives the bride of thirty years a string of lovely pearls and the bridegroom a black pearl tie pin or sleeve buttons.

THIRTY-FIFTH - JADE or CORAL are almost always jewelry, but lamps, vases, book ends, cigarette boxes and figurines of jade, Quartz, white, purple or pink, are among the presents given at this time. Coral is again in the limelight of fashion and combs, earrings, necklaces and clips are set in gold.

The FORTIETH Anniversary is RUBY and gifts range from ruby glassware, china with ruby flowers, bands or in solid ruby color. Precious rubies are for those fortunate enough to be able to present them to each other. But often the children and grandchildren present the lucky pair who have lived together for forty years with clips, earrings, rings, watches and cuff links set in rubies.

The FORTY-FIFTH Anniversary is SAPPHIRE. It is amazing to learn how many marriages have lasted this long in the days when only divorces make the headlines. Sapphire as a color is used for gifts of all kinds and sapphire jewelry often set with diamonds is given to both bride and groom.

The FIFTIETH Anniversary is the GOLDEN WEDDING, and here friends, relatives and townsmen always join in the celebration. Gifts range from golden banded glassware, china decorated with gold, to gold service plates, gold jewelry and gold plate goblets or specially made gold tea services etc.

The FIFTY-FIFTH is EMERALD, and here again green as a color and emerald as a stone are used with gifts of this beautiful jewel that means sincerity and unchanging affection.

The SIXTIETH is the DIAMOND ANNIVERSARY. When sixty years are passed together this is News for everywhere - radio - newspapers - and magazines. In one instance a whole town celebrated and gave each of the pair who had weathered sixty years of life together a diamond ring. Brooches, earrings and watches are proper gifts.

Sixty is the last of our list of Wedding Anniversaries. Many people have asked us for this information and we hope it will be useful.

Always of interest are the large logs of petrified wood in the Petrified Forest National Monument, Arizona. In this new photograph of the locality, the proportions between man and gem-logs is clearly noticed. More and more whole petrified forests are being

IN A NUTSHELL

Recently, it was noted, the display of miniature playground equipment in a local store was a means of arousing interest in a drive to promote funds for better parks and playgrounds in Eugene, Ore. One of the local clubs sponsored the exhibit. All of the display pieces were made by members of the organization.

oOo

A four foot model of the French liner Normandie is the proud piece of workmanship displayed by C. J. Hammond of Maine. This model, which took two years to complete and is true to scale, down to the outside swimming pool, life rafts and boats, and davits, has 1,600 windows, 1,200 port-holes, and 18 feet of railing, which required 900 soldered joints. It shows the patient work of its creator, a watchmaker by trade. The only guides used by Mr. Hammond were pictures of the former luxury liner which he had clipped from newspapers and magazines.

As a matter of information to devotees of miniaturia—and in case someone asks you—probably the smallest portrait of George Washington existing is the one belonging to the miniature rooms display of Mrs. James Ward Thorne, now at the Art Institute of Chicago. The dimensions of this hand-painted copy of the famous Gilbert Stuart portrait is one inch wide by two and a half inches long, in contrast to the original's 12 inches by 30 inches.

oOo

The feminine fans of miniaturia would envy the collection of articles of Mrs. Helen Armitage Larson of California, for not only are they interesting and varied, but they represent the handiwork of Mrs. Larson herself! Miniature grand pianos, Governor Winthrop desks, traveling cases, grandfather clocks, desk sets and many other items—these have all been made by Mrs. Larson, a good deal of them from the walnut wood of her grandmother's old four-poster bed.

oOo

Miniaturia aided the sale of war bonds recently when a model of a hospital ship was used by Miss Frances Langford of the films to promote the sale of more than $12,000,000 in bonds.

What started out as a small scale hobby for Elsie Weinstock of Wisconsin has developed in proportion to her own growth. As a child she began collecting "tinies" as she called them. Her first item was a midget deck of playing cards. Today, her collection includes among other articles, a violin an inch and a half long, strung with human hair, a corn popper large enough to hold one kernel of corn, and a carpet sweeper three-fourths of an inch wide whose tiny wheels and brushes actually revolve.

A nine-year old, whom we heard of recently, is the proud possessor of 125 horses. But, though they aren't alive, they provide a good deal of interest for this young collector. Her hobby, the result of having the measles, started 15 months ago. Some of her selections are hand carved from wood, others moulded, etc. They represent 15 states of the Union and one comes from China. This hobby has influenced the girl to the point where she only wants to read about horses, her favorite, of course, being "Black Beauty."

oOo

Before entering the service, Miss Marguerite Wilson, now of the WAVES, devoted much time to the development of her hobby, the collection of miniature wooden, china and porcelain horses. Not satisfied to just collect, this hobbyist from Des Moines, Ia., fashioned harnesses from old leather gloves, used old rings and jewelry as harness rings, and otherwise devised means to add further interest to her hobby.

In England, the Red Cross profits from the sale of midget furniture made from Winston Churchill's cigar boxes.

Walter Jacques of Connecticut has created some 200 pieces of miniature furniture in the past few years. Even his tools are his own manufacture, and miniature also. They include a tiny plane, clothespin vise, and a diminutive wooden-handled saw and chisel, the latter made from one of his wife's sewing needles.

Miniatures of Landmarks

Although time changes styles and, in the normal course of events, removes landmarks from every locality, it is interesting to note that in most cases there will be some one person who will take it upon himself to do something so that these styles and landmarks are preserved in some form for the student of history or the otherwise interested person. Such is the case with Glea L. Rand of New Hampshire. Mr. Rand, skilled in wood craftsmanship, has in recent months been engaged in fashioning in miniature the parlor of the Peter Flanders tavern of the era of 1800. This tavern, located near the home of Mr. Rand, was in its day a famous landmark, but now, with the passing of time, is falling into decay.

Among the articles which Mr. Rand has contrived to reproduce and which now stand in a replica of the tavern parlor are an old grandfather clock (exact copy of an Osborne clock made in Birmingham, Eng., in 1800), a "large" braided rug, a tavern table, a Boston rocker, and a secretary with tiny inkwell and quill pen. There are also a hand-painted picture of an old resident, tiny candles in old-fashioned holders, and tiny figurines, representing George and Martha Washington, on the mantel.

Sketches Pieces

Before Making

Mrs. Grace Bisby of California is another of those fortunate people who are not only possessed with the collector's spirit for things miniature, but also has the gift of manufacturing them. Less than six years ago, Mrs. Bisby read an article on how to make miniature furniture, and now, her rooms of the small-scale articles are so exact and interesting that they have been put on display to the public several times.

Among her ingenious contrivances are clocks, dishes, and perfume bottles carved from soap, books covered with jackets, pinhead knobs on desks, bureaus, etc., and picture frames, bases for lamps, small bottles, and flower arrangements that turn out to be buttons.

Mrs. Bisby pays a great deal of attention to detail and as a result each of her rooms are complete and exact to the last detail. She has acquired the habit also of making sketches of any piece of furniture she thinks would fit into her miniature rooms—and then goes to work to make it in small-scale size. Her tools include a small jig-saw for cutting work and nail files and emery boards for smoothing out edges. At first she used the balsa wood recommended in the articles for making the miniature furniture, but now uses heavier box wood or three-ply veneer. Much of her furniture is mahogany stained.

Farm Machinery: Small Size

Prof. Glen William McCuen of Columbus, Ohio, teacher of power farming and heavy machinery at Ohio State University, has undertaken an ambitious program which he hopes will graphically chart the development of the threshing machine since its introduction in 1830. Devotees of miniaturia will be interested when it is revealed that Prof. McCuen intends to accomplish this objective by reproducing the machines in models of one-fourth scale.

The first machine to be completed by Prof. McCuen is the 1889 threshing machine. The model took 21 months to finish, one year being devoted to drawing of plans and nine months to assembling parts and building the machine. One thousand parts are included in this model, and the only items purchased complete were eight ball bearings.

Other machines which Prof. McCuen hopes to be able to reproduce in model size are the "groundhog" model of 1830, the "groundhog and shaker" model of 1850 and also the apron model of 1890.

"At the Sign of the Crest"

Marbury Coat-of-Arms

By MABEL LOUISE KEECH

Marbury

SOME OF you are saying: "Why this diamond—what has this to do with a Coat-of-Arms? No shield nor helmet here!" And others who have had opportunity and the desire to study the subject somewhat, will say: Oh! Here is a lady's Coat-of-Arms! And those people will be right.

This is a custom—yes, a rule—in English Heraldry. A lady does not bear the man's shield with helmet, but wears the symbols that are or were her father's or husband's, on a lozenge, or diamond shape background. This is not only considered the "lady-like" way, but it distinguishes the ladies' from the men's Armorial Bearing, for social and legal purposes.

The lozenge was, in earlier days, always used as a "hatchment," and is still, to some extent, but not as commonly as up to the 19th century. The hatchment is a plaque of the Coat-of-Arms in stone, wood, or metal, placed on the porch or door of the home when a person has died; and is then fastened to the monument permanently.

The record of a lady's Coat-of-Arms wherever pictured, whether alone, or next to her husband's, is in England, always on the lozenge. Only if it is "quartered" or joined, with his, is it on the shield.

Another rule about a lady's Coat-of-Arms, is that only a queen may use a crest that belongs to the family. That is considered a special grant denoting some experience or adventure belonging definitely to the man. People in this country generally have the impression that a lady can use only the crest. It is just the opposite.

Understand, however, that this is English ruling. There are no rules in this country about the bearing of Arms. But, in 1634 when Ann Marbury Hutchinson came to America to live, she would have brought her Marbury Coat-of-Arms on a lozenge, whether it were hand-painted on sheepskin, embroidered on her linens, or perhaps carved on her linen chest.

Because her sister and she were the only ones of the Marbury family who came, the shield with helmet, mantling and crest, would not have been found in any record here. No doubt this is the reason that the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, in making up the "Roll of Arms" of the early families, has the Marbury pictured as on a lozenge. And their record gave the writer the idea of using and explaining this form which is so seldom seen.

Argent on a fesse gules three garbs or. This is the description for the Marbury Coat ascribed to the family seated in co. Lincoln, where Ann Marbury Hutchinson, and Katherine Marbury Scott and their ancestors lived.

Translated into non-Heraldic terms: A silver (argent) shield charged with a horizontal band (fesse) of red (gules), on which are three gold (or) sheaves of wheat (garbs).

The fesse is a horizontal band across the shield, occupying one-third of the surface of the shield. It is one of nine so-called Honorable Ordinaries," straight-sided figures, symbols first used to identify the men wearing armour. It was the military girdle of honor, granted only to military commanders of high rank.

The garb, or sheaf of wheat, indicates the holding of large landed estates; and "that the first bearer did deserve well for his hospitality." The "harvest of his hopes" had been secured.

Colors are representative of the personal characteristics of the original bearer, granted only if he be worthy. Silver signifies sincerity and peace; red, courage and magnanimity; gold, generosity and elevation of mind.

"The Marbury Ancestry—the English Ancestry of Anne Marbury Hutchinson and Katherine Marbury Scott," by Meredith B. Colket, Jr., describes the Ancient Arms of the Marburys in Cheshire, and not this one granted to the co. Lincoln branch. Translated, it is a black shield with a silver cross having scalloped edges, and between the four arms, four silver triangles point down, or sometimes spear-heads. The crest is a Saracen's head resting on a chapeau. This was granted in the time of Edward II.

Mr. Colket has a very fine genealogy of the English family, and some interesting features. For instance, he gives the lines without a missing link to several of the Magna Carta Barons, including de Vere, de Bohun, the Bigods, the de Clares, de Quincy, de Lacy, and Malet, Gibbs' Complete Peerage, foremost authority on these lines, is the one through which they are traced.

Before we go further into the English history, let us remind our readers that this Ann Marbury Hutchinson was the one who was banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1638, because of certain religious beliefs which she held, and voiced publicly, that were against the thinking of most of the Colony. With her friends, she removed to Rhode Island, where they set up a community based on the principle that no one was to be "accounted delinquent for doctrine."

The Marbury line is traced to John who died in 1460. The father of Ann and Katherine was Rev. Francis Marbury, who had one daughter Susan by his first wife, and 15 children by his second. There were 12 living when he made his will, and to each he gave £1600.

His second wife, the mother of the two girls we mention, was Bridget Dryden, great aunt of John Dryden, poet laureate of England. Her maternal grandmother was Bridget Raleigh.

Rev. Francis was born in London, but his parents had lived in Alford, co. Lincoln, and some of his children were born there. Having studied at Cambridge, he was ordained deacon in Peterborough at the age of 22. He was an independent thinker, and was in prison for being fearless in expressing his thoughts. His daughter Ann followed in his footsteps. His brother Edward was knighted in 1603, by James I.

The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, Vol. 45, tells also of the descent of the Marburys from King Alfred the Great, Charlemagne, and other royal lines. And of course we know that a line to one king means to many others.

The connection to the kings and barons is through the wife of William, son of the John Marbury, just mentioned as having died in 1460. She was Anne Blount, daughter of Sir Thomas whose grandfather, Sir Walter, was first Baron of Montjoy.

His grandfather, Sir Walter Blount, accompanied the Black Prince and John of Gaunt to Spain in 1367. John of Gaunt married Constantia, daughter of Pedro the Cruel, whom he went to aid. Sir Walter Blount married her friend Donna Sancha de Ayala, daughter of the Mayor of Toledo, of which family a Spanish poet wrote: "He who is connected with Ayala will never need ancestors." That line traces to 1064 when Alfonso VI gave one of the family the Lordship of Ayala.

Sir Walter, called "Blunt" by Shakespeare in "Henry IV," was slain in 1403 in the battle of Shrewsbury. Lord Douglas thought he had slain the king, but Sir Walter and others had worn similar armor to protect their sovereign.

William Hutchinson and Ann Marbury were married in London Aug. 9th, 1612. They moved to Alford where they had 14 children, before they sailed to New England in the good ship "Griffin," in 1634. After their removal to Rhode Island, William Hutchinson became Governor. His death occurred in 1642, and then Ann and her family moved to Eastchester, New York. The next summer, she, and five of her children, were tortured and killed by the Indians. The site of her home is in Pelham Bay Park, New York City, about 10 or 12 miles from the City Hall.

According to the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, Vol. 20, page 363, the Coat-of-Arms of the family of Gov. William Hutchinson has not been confirmed. His 2nd cousin Thomas presented his pedigree, but it was marked in the College of Arms in London: "Respited for Proof," as it could not be connected with the Yorkshire family that had the Arms. The family of Richard Hutchinson of Salem, Mass., has been traced to the armorial family of co. York.

Katherine (sometimes spelled Catherine) Marbury was 19 years younger than her sister Ann Hutchinson. She was born in London about 1610, and died in Newport, R. I., May 2nd, 1687.

In 1632, at Barkhamstead, Hertfordshire, she married Richard Scott, born at Glemsford, co. Suffolk, the son of Edward, and of the line of Scott's Hall in Kent, who traced their lines through John Baliol to the early Kings of Scotland.

Richard and Katherine probably came to America with the Hutchinsons. He was admitted as a member of the Boston church in 1634, and was a witness at the trial of Ann Hutchinson March 22, 1638. He did not agree with her, but asked that she be given more time—"things is with her in Distraction, and she cannot recollect her thoughts."

He also moved to Providence, and worked on the establishment of an independent religious colony.

The marriage place and date as given above is in Hertfordshire Parish Registers by Phillimore, Vol. I., page 23, a reference given in "Marbury Ancestor," and here is the item copied by my hand:

"Berkhamstead Marriages—Richard Scotte, Scott, & Katherine Morbury, Marberie, 7 June, 1632."

Therefore the interesting article on the Scotts in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, Vol. 60, page 169, is in error when it says that "In 1637 Richard Scott went to Boston and married Catherine Marbury."

Richard and Catherine had 5 or 6 children, and from their oldest son John are descended those of the Scott name. Holder, Clarke, Beere, and Richardson were surnames of their daughters' husbands. Many of the Rhode Island records were burned by the Indians, and it is difficult for descendants to trace all of their lines.

We mentioned the Coat-of-Arms belonging to the ancient family of Cheshire. The surname, then Merberie, is first on record in the time of Henry III, derived from the village of that name, which was given to William de Merberie 'to hold as his father Ranulph and his brother had held before him.' One of the family had built "Marbury Hall." This stately residence remained in the family until the 19th century, when a member of Parliament bought it.

Of this branch was another Francis, who came to Maryland about 1680, according to Mackenzie's "Colonial Families of the United States," Vol. II., the Bowie Genealogy, and also "Marbury Ancestry." He settled in Prince George's County, near the town of Piscataway. He owned two large tracts of land, one called "Carroll's Kindness," and the other "Marbury's Chance." He was land commissioner for Prince George's Co., and a Judge of Survey in Charles Co. His first wife's name was Mary Greene, and his second, Frances Herd. His will was probated on June 5th, 1734.

Francis had at least two grandsons in the War of the Revolution. One was Luke who was a Colonel, and a prisoner for three years and a half after the Battle of Germantown. He was a delegate to the first Constitutional Convention held at Annapolis in 1776, and after the war, a member of the House of Delegates.

The Marbury name is so seldom seen, due to the fact that most of the descendants now come from the distaff lines, and do not bear the name, that you may even wonder why it was chosen—it is unfamiliar to many of you.

An answer—Some of my selections are the suggestions of correspondents. This is one of those selections, coming from the one I have spoken of as my "constructive criticiser," and I call "friend." He said this was one of the few outstanding families that could be definitely connected step by step without question—to Magna Charta Barons and Royalty, and he thought my readers would appreciate it. He generously gave me some of the references. Let's hope you—and he—are enjoying it.

FRANKLIN'S BIRTHDAY

This month

It is January 17th, and he was born in 1706 in Boston. Philadelphia, however, celebrates this day more than does any other locality, because of his long and notable career there.

One time I asked that other Franklins, and particularly Benjamins, would write their lines for this column. Here is a letter, most of which I quote, from the head of the firm of Franklin and Lindsey, Consulting Engineers, Crozer Building, on Chestnut St., in Philadelphia. How fine of him to write, and how interesting to know there is a Benjamin Franklin in business today in Philadelphia!

"James, Joseph, and Benjamin Graysburg came to Philadelphia from the Island of Barbadoes in the year 1692. A John Franklin lived in the Barbadoes in the year 1691.

The Graysburgs were Ship Carpenters and purchased five hundred acres of land in Gloucester County, New Jersey, where James, one of the brothers, settled in 1700. At his death he left a son, James Graysburg, 2nd, who had a daughter, Mary, who married a John Franklin in 1743.

John Franklin, husband of Mary Franklin (nee Graysbury) in his will dated July 20th, 1774, and approved July 20th, 1775, named four sons and two daughters, among them Joseph.

Joseph Franklin, my Great-Great-Grandfather, was commissioned a Second Lieutenant in Captain Wm. Talbot's Company, Third Battalion of Philadelphia Militia, commanded by Colonel Nixon in 1777. He died November 27th, 1781, and was buried in Old Christ Church Graveyard on Second Street in Philadelphia, Pa. This is just 3 blocks from where Benjamin Franklin is buried. His widow moved to Marcus Hook, Pa., where her son, Joseph Franklin, Jr., married and had 6 children, among them Benjamin. Joseph, the father of these children, was a non-commissioned officer in the War of 1812.

Benjamin Franklin of the above, my grandfather, was commissioned a Captain in the Mexican War; and his son, John Franklin, my father, was a First Lieutenant in the Civil War.

My belief is that the celebrated Benjamin Franklin and ourselves had a common ancestry.

The "Folgers," many of whom still live on the island of Nantucket, claim that Benjamin Franklin inherited his genius from that branch of the Folgers, his mother Abijah's side, and not from the "Franklin."

Yours very sincerely,
(Signed) Benjamin Franklin

Another pastime, somewhat better entitled to the epithet 'manly,' is fast following cock-fighting into oblivion. The prize-ring, once patronized by prince and peer, has gone to the bad most unequivocally. A few years back, it suddenly emerged from its obscurity, and became the talk of the town and the country. It was but a dying flicker—the momentary vigour preceding the fatal relapse. The resuscitation of the Ring is an impossibility; what little sympathy the general public felt for it lies buried in a certain grave at Highgate, in which the once-coveted champion's belt might have been fittingly buried. Condemned by public opinion, and banned by the law, it is no wonder that pugilism has sunk to what it is, but it must be owned it dies hard. A must have an extraordinary fancy for fistic battles, to endure the dangers and disagreeables inseparable to the bringing off a fight. The admirers of the noble art may well sigh for days of auld lang syne, when the morning papers contained such advertisements as this: 'A Tryall of Skill to be fought at the Bear Garden, in Marrow-Bone-Fields, at the Boarded House, on Wednesday next, beginning at three of the clock precisely, between Edward Parkes of Coventry, Master of the New School of Defence, and Thomas Comins, Dragon, Master of the said School.'

Diversions were not wanting for the gentler portion of the British public; here was a treat for that public Trinculo had in his mind's-eye when his corporeal eye fell upon the island monster: 'At the Great Booth, in West Smithfield, is to be seen a large collection of strange and wonderful creatures, all alive. 1. A wonderful Dromedary from Turkey, a noble creature, 22 hands high, and 12 feet long. 2. The Turkey Horse, not 3 feet high; being so little that he is kept in a box. 3. The Little English Woman, 2 feet 2 inches high, 27 years old, straight and proportionable, being the least woman that ever was seen in England. 4. Two monstrous Creatures, male and female, resembling humane Nature, from Ethiopia. 5. A Whistler from Brazil, that hangs by his tail and takes his natural rest. 6. A Picary, which charms the birds with his voice, that they fall down and become his prey. 7. A Wild Satyr, from Cape de Bon Esperance. With several other varieties, too tedious to mention. To be seen from 8 in the morning till 9 at night, without loss of time.'

Service Men's Papers

Collectors are now gathering war newspapers, many of them issued by large newspapers and corporations and mailed to employees who were in the various branches of the service. Wilson Straley sends us copies of the Service Star published by the Kansas City Star for the benefit of the several hundred employees who were absent on war leave.

These papers are going to make interesting, and to a certain extent valuable, material in the years to come.

The Picture POST CARD

FRENCH CARDS

By KENNETH N. RINKER

JUST AS collectors of American art post cards like to check up on their printers, so does a collector of French view and art cards take notice of their publishers.

This article is not intended to be an extended discourse upon the publishers of French cards, although it might be interesting to talk about the specialties in which some of the publishers indulge, and the special methods used by some of the printers.

But we'll be satisfied in merely listing some of the printers and publishers, in the hope that it will lead others who own large sets of French cards to check them over.

Often it is impossible to determine if the name on the cards is that of the printer himself, or merely the publisher or jobber ordering the work done. In the following list, Imprimeur means printer; Imp. or Impr. stands for Imprimerie, print shop; Cie. is company; Freres, brothers; Fils, sons; other French words and abbreviations should be understood.

The list which I have compiled follows:

Imp. des Alpes, Marie Frinzone, Aix-les-Bains; E. Reynaud, Imp.-Ed-it., Chambrey; Imp. B. & G., Lyons; Bloc Freres, Lyons; F and T, Brest.

M. T. Imprimeur, Limoges; Levy Fils et Cie, Paris; Anciens Etab. Neurdein et Cie, E. Crete, Succ., Corbeil-Paris; Impr. Edia, Versailles; LF, Toulouse; A. Papeghin, Tours-Paris. Aqua-Photo, L. V. and Cie., Paris; H. Breger Freres Grav., St. "Germain, Paris; Imp. Phot., A. Thiriat and Cie., Toulouse; Etablissements Albanu Paris; Photoype Labouche Freres, Toulouse.

I P. M. Paris; Cartolina, L. M., Paris; Raphael Tuck et Fils Ltd., Paris; Imp. Catala Freres, Paris; L. B. Dijon.

Cigarette-Card Collecting

Probably the most popular hobby in the United States during the dawning twentieth century was the collecting of cigarette cards, claims Karl Baarslag in his December Esquire article, The Era of the Cigarette Card. These gaily-colored little bits of pasteboard caused considerable rivalry among yesterday's youngsters and they swapped their duplicate cards with the shrewdness of Yankee horse traders.

In describing The Era of the Cigarette Card, Baarslag wonders at the popularity of the pasteboards for they were the publicity scheme that made the new-fangled European way of using tobacco a hit in the United States. With each new issue of cowboys, Indians, Greek Gods and Goddesses, or prize fighters, the number of collectors increased by leaps and bounds. Everyone vied with his friends and neighbors in completing sets and securing fairly rare cards.

The rage died, but the hobby persisted. In both the United States and England there are still groups enthusiastically collecting and trading sets of the little pasteboards. The once plentiful cards are now comparative rarities, so the swapping today is even shrewder than it was when this unique hobby first began, Esquire concludes.

UNUSUAL CARDS

IN MY ALBUM

Cards of 1900 made of leather by the Connecticut Indian; double cards, by expert Connecticut craftsmen; Yucca cards of California, made by the Navajo Indian; a hand painted card of oil pictures the Royal Prince, leaving Buckingham Place; two royal guards mounted on beautiful, jet black horses are pictured on one card; a card done in water colors of Saint Andrew's by the Sea, Rye Beach, N. H. An embossed set of cards in "Memorian to our National Dead" with wreaths of violets, holly, etc; pictures of the tombs of Garfield, Lincoln, Grant, Washington and many other patriots.

Two little girls pictured with the wording "Hello, Today is Wednesday;" another stating "Howdy, It's Saturday," picturing the two little children with real human hair; Christmas cards, beaded and made of tinsel; old valentines of red satin; birthday greetings, showing purple violets, with a pink horseshoe, is made of velvet cloth of the same colors; another card says, "Greetings from Helen," and affixed in the center are two rose petals of a deep crimson color, dried from the real flower, by an artist of the early 1900; cards of glass, tin, rubber, wood, fibers and fabrics.

With the return of peacetime pursuits I hope to get out and find more cards on the highways and byways.
